JUST BEGUN

This was the first year at West Potomac High School — a new school created through a merging of Fort Hunt and Groveton High Schools. The merging came as a result of declining enrollment in the Southeast part of Fairfax County, declining enrollment that was caused by real estate prices too high for most young couples to afford. The issue over the closing of a high school, the first time a high school in Fairfax County was closed, was a controversial one that stretched through the 1984-1985 school year. Eventually Fort Hunt High School was closed and its students relocated to Groveton High School, which was renamed West Potomac High School.

The result of the merger was the “Power on the Potomac,” a new powerhouse of a school for the southeastern section of Fairfax County. The school promised to be an excellent one; combining the two schools’ excellent faculties, student bodies, and the wide range of available facilities seemed a no-miss proposition. And the school is an excellent one. Its SRA and SAT scores were among the highest in the county. Its football team, the Wolverines, were consistently ranked on top in most polls and finished their regular season with only one loss and nine wins. The performances of all of the athletic teams far surpassed any of those seen at either Fort Hunt or Groveton.

Although most people had their reservations about the school ever becoming united (Fort Hunt and Groveton were traditionally rivals), the school rallied and became one.

STARTING THE TRADITION OFF RIGHT

Finding the right bus was never as difficult as it was that very first day.

August 26, 1985: The Beginning

The first day of West Potomac High School was marked by, among other things, long lines and heavy traffic. Traffic in the parking lots, on Quander Road, and in the upstairs halls of Quander building. Lines, often seeming to contain the entire student body, to wait to see guidance counselors, (despite their warnings that positively no schedule change requests would be honored until the second week of school) to get food in Left Quander cafeteria, and to sign up for favorite, or at least favored, PE activities.

Students arrived at 7:45 on Monday, August 26 to find several reporters and camera crews on the scene, giving the much-awaited school its first media test. To outsiders the press coverage may have seemed excessive, but to seasoned veterans of the school closing issue it was all fairly routine.

It was a day of adjustment for everyone — teachers and students. Ex-Fort Hunt teachers had to adjust to completely different classrooms. Ex-Groveton teachers also had to adjust, many of them arrived to find that their classroom assignments had been changed from last year. Former Tigers had to get used to the change facilities and overcrowding at what was once a comfortable, spacious school. Former Federals had to accustom themselves to an entirely different campus, one that for them lacked the warmth of their old school. They also had to adapt to a school with three buildings, three cafeterias, and a much more spread type of layout.

With lunchtime came a whole slew of questions: Which cafeteria does one it in? Where's the junior-senior cafeteria at this place? What happened to the murals and the round tables? What's the deal with this line? Eventually Wolverines straightened themselves out and settled down to the true purpose of lunch.

At 2:06 the bell rang and the first day of West Potomac High School ended. Well, not entirely. Older wolverines still had to drive home and when they got to their cars they were dismayed to discover that no cars would be allowed to leave until all of the buses (more than forty of them) had departed.

Wrinkles remained to be ironed out, but all in all the first day went well — despite the anxiety felt by many officials of the Fairfax County school system. The two student bodies merged smoothly, and at least one lingering question remained for at least 500 students: Whatever happened to senior privileges?

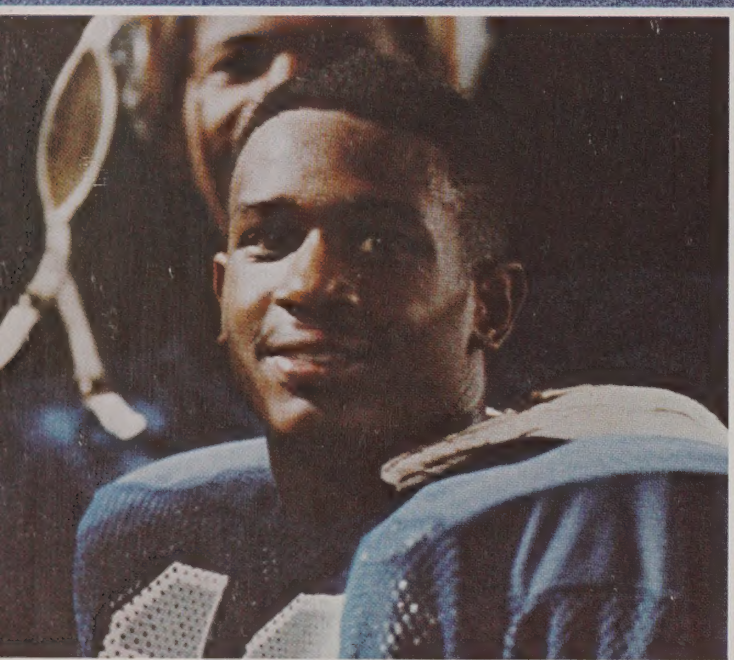

Now full fledged Wolverines, two friends greet one another outside the school bus.

HOMECOMING TRADITION BEGINS WITH A VICTORY

The wolverines faced Gunston District rival Mayfield on October 11th in West Potomac High School's first homecoming. Despite an early field goal score by John Holland, Mayfield led the Wolverines 7-3 for most of the game. In fact, many of the spectators feared that West Potomac might lose its first homecoming, not to mention its first game. With a few minutes left in the game, though, fears were put to rest by David Green, who ran an incredible 92 yards for a touchdown that put West Potomac safely over the top and enabled the Wolverines to capture their seventh straight victory, beating the Hawks 10-7.

Quarterback Pat Walker executes a crucial play during the Wolverine-Hawks game.

Dave Summers reflects on the hard work that paid off in another Wolverine win as he glances at the scoreboard.

"V-I-C-T-O-R-Y!" The Pep Club carries the spirit of the crowd.

The stands go wild as the last few records tick off the clock.

The crowd at homecoming was a spirited one, despite West Potomac's lack of any true tradition. An overflow crowd of 4500 was on hand to see the Wolverines defeat the Hawks. Alumni from both Fort Hunt and Groveton came to watch, and a special alumni tent was set up to greet them and to provide them with WEST POTOMAC WOLVERINES badges. Students came to watch the game and the halftime activities, and distinguished themselves by donning blue, silver, and white clothing and by wearing various buttons, all extolling their team.

The crowd remained spirited throughout the game, even though Hayfield led West Potomac through much of it, and eventually cheered their team on to victory.

Playing Hayfield was a "snap" for Dave Samoway.

... AND NOW FOR YOUR ENTERTAINMENT

A brand new tradition at West Potomac was started on October 13, when a parade was held in honor of West Potomac's homecoming. The parade began at Bucknell Elementary School and snaked its way through several West Potomac neighborhoods before ending at the school itself. The drill team, marching band, cheerleaders, and of course the floats, all participated in the parade.

The floats once again were seen during halftime. Some traditions never die, and the display of the floats is one. After the floats made their way around the stadium the winning float was announced, and to everyone's surprise the sophomore class, with its variation on the space theme had emerged victorious.

Also on parade during halftime was the first West Potomac homecoming court, consisting of twelve seniors and two juniors, sophomores and freshmen. The climatic moment finally arrived when Janice Nedbal was crowned queen by Associate Principal John Travis.

During the halftime parade, senior princesses Tawnya Brown and Nikki Brew smile at the crowd.

The Freshman float, with its original lunar theme, makes its way around the track.

After being crowned homecoming queen, Janice Nedbal is escorted by her proud father and Associate Principal John Travis.

Showing that the lower brass has class, band members get organized for the homecoming parade.

Junior guys respond to the crowd's support as they follow their float.

HOMECOMING DANCE IS A GREAT SUCCESS.

Another important event in the Homecoming weekend is the homecoming dance. Students and alumni danced the night away, looking only slightly ridiculous in their semi-formal attire without shoes. (which couldn't be worn because the dance was held in the gym and street shoes would ruin the finish of its floor).

The traditional homecoming dance evening is began with dinner at a nice restaurant. Some West Potomac students' dined at local restaurants like Chi-Chi's while others ended up at restaurants in Old Town. Wolverines could be seen at 219, Kings Landing, Portners and the Cedar Knoll Inn. Following the magnificent repast, couples headed back to West Potomac, and entered the gym, using their pre-sale only tickets.

The pre-sale tickets caused much confusion for students, and caused more than one senior couple to be turned away when they attempted to buy their tickets at the door.

Homecoming King and Queen Tom Kiernan and Janice Nedbal share a slow dance.

Homecoming proves that West Potomac can definitely dance up a storm.

Dancing the night away, Floyd Cline and Marcia Ehle spend the first West Potomac Homecoming together.

Enjoying herself at Homecoming Stephanie Huxhold rocks to the music.

The Homecoming dance proves to be a class act even in the gym.

WOLVERINE TEAMS PUT THEIR BEST TO THE TEST

Fall sports brought new opportunities for students to meet each other and unify toward a common goal. Fall sports also brought out the new tradition of athletic excellence that was to stand for West Potomac.

The football team ended its regular season with a 49-6 rout of Bishop Ireton. This helped the wolverines finish their regular season with a record of 9-1-0, a season that was highlighted by the 17-3 victory over defending Virginia state champions TC Williams.

The girls field hockey team went for most of its season without being scored upon, thanks to goalkeeper Katherine Perry and a super offense led by Mary Ebhardt and Junior Olympian Ann Rosamond — an offense that rarely let the ball go past them.

Crew began its practice season, and Golf and Cross-country both won the Gunston District title.

Senior John Holland sends the ball deep into Titan territory with the opening kickoff in West Potomac's victorious first game against the defending state champions.

Keeping their eyes on the action, Varsity Football players maintain the necessary winning concentration from the sideline during the T.C. Williams game.

Coach Horton psyches up the field hockey team before they extend the winning streak that brought them all the way to the state finals, by beating the Hayfield Hawks.

Megan Roberts and Lindsey Rogers take on three Hayfield opponents.

Members of Crew, West Potomac's first outdoor water sport, practice during fall training on the Occoquan reservoir.

Outside the guidance department in Quander, freshman Chris Carter discusses his schedule with his mother. Jennifer Styles, on her way to a drama rehearsal after a busy day at school, shows that there is room for students at West Potomac to stand out from the crowd.

Watching the band rehearse its halftime show one sunny October afternoon, Becky Peebles and Romy Maimon practice gesture drawing during their fourth period art class.

West Potomac, with all its available classes and activities, offers many opportunities for students — to develop their talents, to discover new pursuits, and also to exhibit these skills in a variety of ways. After figuring out what classes to take, students find time to join clubs and teams. Then the fun begins — drama productions, sporting competitions, art shows, or even the science fair. Whatever interest a student has, there is a pretty good chance that it can be practiced here at school.

Catherine Davey and Kate Louise Hamilton show their true colors as comedians in the Community Day parade as members of the Clown Corps.

My hope is that West Potomac will fulfill its destiny of becoming one of the finest educational institutions in the nation. We have already demonstrated this fall that we are capable of fielding athletic teams that can compete with anyone in our district and region. We have seen evidence of excellence in music and drama. We are expecting a high level of achievement in academics. It is up to us in the first year to create a community of students, teachers, and parents who support each other in striving for excellence.

This has been the most challenging, exciting, and rewarding year of my career in education. It was like opening a new school and, at the same time, returning home: I taught at the old Groveton for several years. I owe a great debt to the students; they made it work (and they also made me very happy). The students, the staff, and the parents have all contributed to the fine opening of a fine school. The traditions have begun with a bang.

HIT THE DECK

"Good morning! Happy Monday! It's a mild 46 degrees out and no snow fell as predicted —" You open one eye and shut off the disgustingly cheerful deejay on your alarm clock. Another school day — can you survive until next weekend? "Wake up! Hit the deck! You only have 15 minutes to get ready!" yells Mom from the kitchen. You stumble around in the dark, trying to find your socks and the light switch. Squinting to keep out the unwelcome, blinding light, you get dressed in record time, and glance groggily at the clock. Ten 'til seven! Can you make the bus in ten minutes?

You fly downstairs, gobble up your Wheaties, and put on your shoes as you dash back upstairs to brush your teeth. Finally, you catch the bus as it's pulling away from the curb. After you get your breath back, you utter your first words of the morning to your friends, "Hey, did you have a good weekend?" "Yeah," comes the reply, "Did you study for that English test?" TEST!? What test?

So begins another school day at West Potomac.

Class? Are we supposed to be in class now?

First period is the ideal time to finish up the morning chores according to Jodi Waugh and many others.

Still dreaming from the night before, Marci Sweet and Robin Ebhardt prepare to go to class.

ON OPPOSITE PAGE: After a long night, Carlos DeMoraes collapses in a temporary loss of "Morning Momentum".

In record time, Hillary Hoggard brushes her teeth.

Only three more hours until SLEEP!

Getting There Is Half The Fun

There are as many ways of getting around as there are students, but all would agree that getting there is half the fun. West Potomac is filled with different "wheels", from bikes to skateboards to cars. Nearly everyone walks and rides bikes around their neighborhood, and many students walk to school. Skateboarding is a fast and fun way to get around between classes and at lunch. Upperclassmen have the privilege of a driver's license, and many have the use of a family car or even their own car. Motorcycles and mopeds are handy ways of traveling for some. To get around town, students often take the metrobus or the subway. For longer trips, students go by bus, boat, plane, or train, and some might even go skiing or riding a horse.

Peter Avellone's Honda serves not only as a motorcycle, but also as a recliner. "Want a ride?" ask Angie Glasco and Susan Gattis.

Lunch is an ideal time to brush up on skateboarding stunts for Alan Austin, Rick Hawthorne, Mick McAndrews, and Jeff Spahr.

"If all else fails, walking is always an option," says Lisa Keepe. Beach bum Matt Davis hasn't learned yet that he can't get around with a surfboard without waves.

Speeding by walkers, skateboarder Eric Gurtner never has to worry about being late.

On the Potomac River, sailing is the only way to go for Debbie Epstein and Lani Kremers.

After Hours

Friday, 2:05: As the second hand reaches the 12, impatient students anticipate the "freedom bell." Finally, the moment of expectation arrives. School is over! Snatching their books, clamoring students race out of their classrooms, like animals out of cages. Instantly, the campus is a mob scene. For a few chaotic moments, student pile into cars and file onto buses.

The two-day paradise has begun. We recover by escaping to basketball games, shopping malls, parties, dances, restaurants, football games . . . Afterwards, McDonald's and Shakeys are crowded with West Potomac students.

After a night on the town, Saturday morning sleep-ins are certainly treasured. Sunday afternoons mark the close of heavenly weekend — with the tinge of dread of yet another Monday morning.

On a brisk Saturday in Spring, Hank O'Rourke shoots some hoops.

Happiness is an Old Town Stroll on a Friday afternoon for Jodi Henson, Mary Priestland, and Lila Rafferty.

Sipping a strawberry milkshake, Rob Lancaster picks out a movie.

Cheering is as much fun as watching the game for Caroline Duncker.

McDonalds is always a popular place for WPHS students to gather.

GET INTO THE SPIRIT

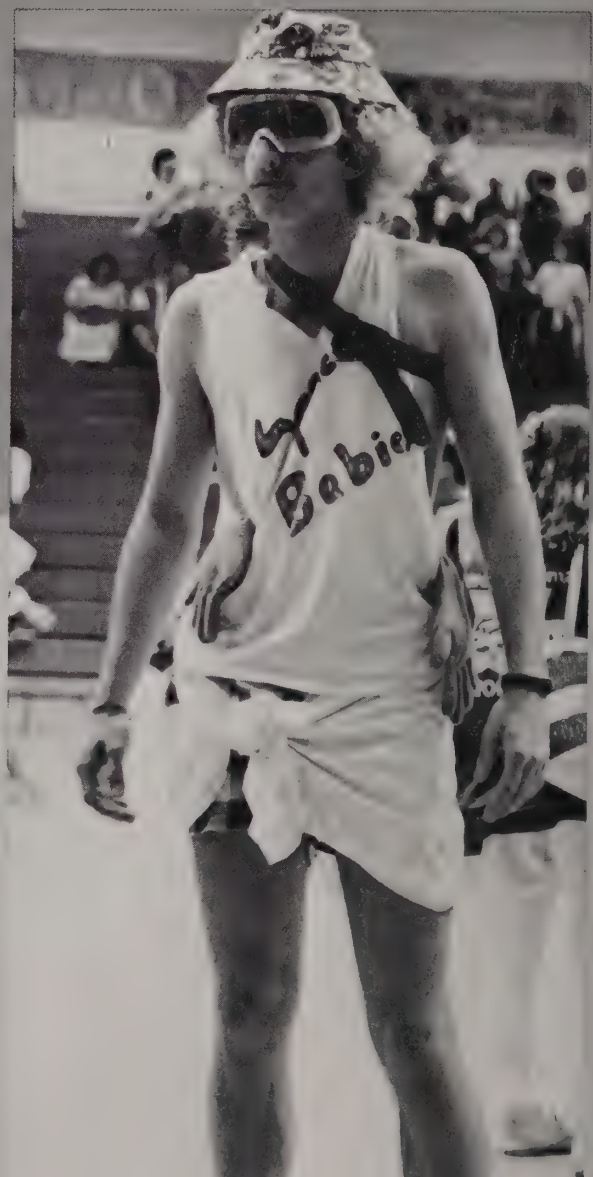

Spirit Week. The very name can bring a smile to the face of even the least spirited Wolverines. Spirit Week was seen as the time to dress in elaborate costumes and scream oneself silly, all in the name of school spirit. Spirit Week is the prelude to Homecoming — and has traditionally included Dress Up days. This year's Spirit Dress Up days were some of the most unique ever seen. Clone Day gave students an opportunity to show original attire and to have their friends do the same. Visitors to West Potomac on Space Day Might have feared that some outer-space invasion force had landed and taken over the school. End-of-the-World Natural Disasters Day proved to be a favorite, with Wolverines wearing lifejackets, safety preservers, and THE WORLD WILL END signs. Beach Day enabled West Potomac students to look as if summer had never ended, and cross-dressing prevailed on Vice-Versa Day. The final day of Spirit week was Blue/Silver/White Day — featuring students wearing a garb of the colors of their school.

"Let's get rowdy," exclaims Dan Schneider at West Potomac's first pep rally.

Up and coming business executive Tracy Howard studies the stock marked on Vice Versa Day.

"Hey, Tamir, we're crushing!" exclaims David Molnar to Tamir Noufi while Jen Peterson roots them on.

Tae Lim pities Mike Rosenfeld who woke up just a little too early on Vice Versa day.

Clones Andrew Hosmer, Carlos DeMoreas, and Jack Hoggard show their spirit in a creative way.

HOMECOMING COURT

During the enthusiastic pep rally earlier that day, the Wolverine king, Tom Kiernan, was chosen from the 16 princes. This set the mood for an exciting and historic Homecoming game: West Potomac's first.

After the first half of the Homecoming game decorative class floats had rolled by and after the halftime performances, West Potomac's fans cheered for their "royalty", the procession of the Wolverines' first Homecoming Court. Smiling and waving, the 19 princesses drove by in classy convertibles. They were accompanied by the escort of their choice and anxiously awaited the announcement of 1985's Homecoming queen, Janice Nedbal.

THE SPOTLIGHT'S ON "FOOLS"

The Drama department started things out on the right foot in November with its fall production — Fools, a comic fable written by Neil Simon. Fools was the story of Kulyenchikov and his curse, a curse which made all of the people of a turn-of-the-century Ukranian village stupid. Scott Barber was cast as the lead, Leon Tolchinsky, a schoolmaster who came to the village to try to educate the townspeople. Sophomore Suzy Nece played the serenely sweet but dumb girl — Sophia — who captures Leon's heart. Other stars in West Potomac's first dramatic presentation were Alex Tratensek and Curry Mills, juniors, who played Sophia's parents, and Stephen Arner, who played the evil Count Yousekevitch. The play was directed by English and Drama teacher Melissa Mathis and Senior Larry Henry. An elaborate set was created by Senior Bill White and the stage manager was Junior Julie Ball.

"I never did learn how to read one of these things!" says Dr. Zubritsky (Alex Tratensek) to the Magistrate (Michael Werneck).

Last-minute touchups on the set are painted by Emily Townley.

Experienced actors, Curry Rose Mills (as Lenya Zubritsky) and Alex Tratensek (as Nikolai Zubritsky) seemingly have no problem with stage fright.

A confusing wedding takes place when the Magistrate (Michael Werneck) tries to begin the service between the unwilling Sophia Zubritsky (Michelle Madison) and the villainous Count Gregor (Craig Anderson). Frustrated, Leon Tolchinsky (Scott Barber) stands by.

"Just remember, put one arm in each hole," Dr. Zubritsky (Alex Tratensek) advises the Magistrate (Michael Werneck).

"I've been milking my cow since 4 o'clock!" Yench (Rebecca Godbey) tells Slovitch (Adam Joyce) and Snetsky (Luke Peterschmidt).

WORKIN' HARD FOR THE MONEY

Most of us have worked sometime in our lives, whether it was to mow a lawn, babysit the neighbor's kids, or do the laundry for mom. At W.P., many students hold part-time jobs to earn extra pocket money. Popular job spots range from Haagen-Dazs to the Exxon station. Restaurants such as ChiChis, McDonalds, Rustler's Steak House, and Shakey's are common places to recognize someone on a Saturday afternoon. Department stores are also popular job locations, especially Marshalls, Bradlees, and the new Caldor. Other students are employed by Hechinger's, the Mount Vernon Recreation Center, and Erol's Video Store. Some students volunteer at the library and the hospital.

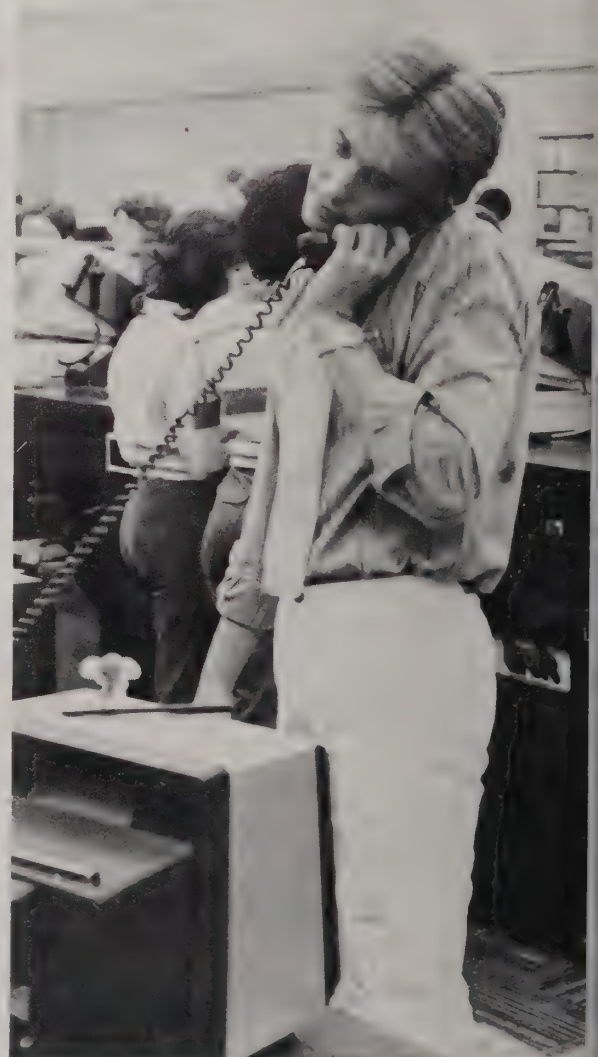

While most workers hold just weekend jobs, some work for as much as twenty hours a week. Some are in work co-op programs such as C.O.E. or hold jobs by using the skills that they have learned in V.I.C.A., I.C.T., H.E.R.O., and W.E.C.E.P., which prepare them for a job after graduation.

"Sorry, sir, Tootsie is out right now," says Tom Harding to an anxious customer over the phone.

Julie Taylor serves christmas shoppers buying toys for "good boys and girls" at the Christmas Attic.

For Chris James, work is tiring at Erol's Video Center.
 "Hey Howard, is there any more Boysenberry?" asks Jody Hensen.
 "Have a nice day and come back soon," says Tara Burke.

ALL IN A DAY'S WORK

Many students at West Potomac have either never heard of or know what I.C.T. is. It stands for Industrial Cooperative Training. Approximately 51 participating students get out 4th or 5th period, or just after school, to go to work. Work can be anything from a dental assistant to a welder. Students do this for various reasons; many don't plan to go to college, and want to get an early start in their field. I.C.T. places them according to their personality. Almost 85% of these students stay in their career field for the rest of their lives. Many get promoted or even get their own business started after a few years. However, this program does include the college bound. About one fifth of the students are computer programmers or engineering assistants at Ft. Belvoir and the Naval Research Lab. Sponsor Mr. Tolley claims, "It's excellent for students who are earning their own way through college." A lot of kids just need money.

The program lasts for two years and usually starts with sixteen-year-old Juniors. Occasionally, in special cases, I.C.T. will take sophomores and seniors.

In the class part of the program, the students study "life skills"; they must work at least 540 hours to pass the class. It is worth 3 credits.

In the past twenty-five years, I.C.T. has placed students in every field there is. Member Cornelius Hackley says, "You take it not just for the credits but for better environmental experience in your future job."

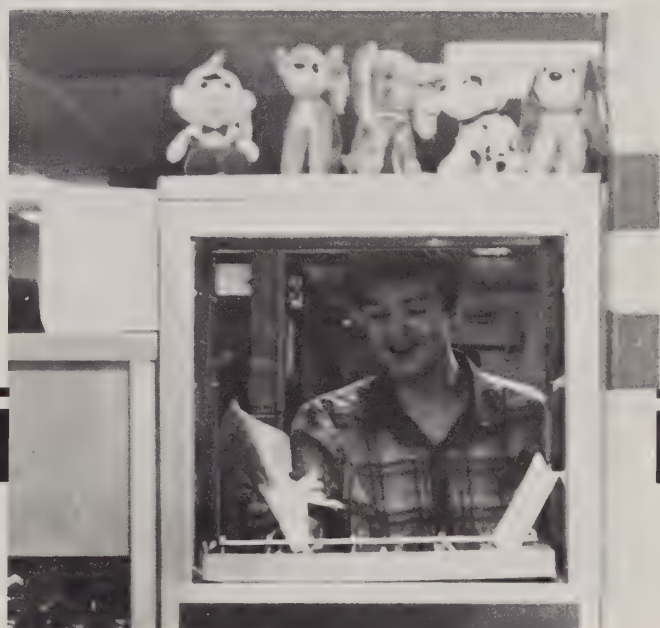

"Don't forget your change!" says Randy McCray to Steve Lee at the Gulf station.

Mopping floors and washing buckets is Kath Henderson's favorite job at Hardee's.

"Half a tank, that'll be $39.87, sir," says Chris Neill to this Cadillac owner.

Deciphering handwriting on prescription envelopes is a skill that Karen Hill has learned working at Peoples Drug Store.

With self-service, breaks are more frequent for Brad Harrison at the Exxon station.

Stocking shelves in the candy aisle at the Variety Store makes Debbie Oudekerk and Aileen Kruk hungry.

"There's a knack to filling french fry bags," muses James Seward at Hardee's.

"Why do they make it so hard to find the price tag?" asks Wendy Chase.

THE SPICE OF LIFE

The spice of life . . . fads, fashions, trends, habits, snow days, music, shopping, sports, movies, weekends, clubs . . . they all add zest to our lives. Because of them, our world is more colorful, and we sleep a little better at night. Outside interests and curiosities season our existence, which otherwise would be bland. As the saying goes, "Life is too important to be taken seriously."

Here is a recipe to enjoy. Preheat brain to 98.6 degrees. Stir in a laugh when necessary. Flavor with thought.

If Only For A While

Trends in '85-'86 were as hot as ever. Old was updated and classic became cool. Cabbage Patch broadened their line, and the Trivial Pursuit went on and on. Coke came in new, classic, cherry, diet, caffeine-free and any combination of the above (and even rugby shirt!). Microwave ovens, home computers, and VCR's became everyday items. The Cosby Show and Miami Vice lead all other TV shows, and White Nights, St. Elmo's Fire and Back to the Future were movie favorites. Fads came in all shapes and sizes: Skateboards and shades, Gumby and Pokey, professional wrestling and the 20-minute workout, Live Aid and Farm Aid, the Redskins and the Bears, Mickey Mouse and Betty Boop, Swatches and "Snappy's". In the music field, the Hooters, U2, Tears for Fears, A-ha and Dire Straits dominated, while the Boss, Bryan Adams, Madonna and Sting said bye-bye to Prince and Cyndi Lauper. Soft, chewy chocolate-chip cookies took over the cookie market, and the natural-tasting NutraSweet replaced cloying Saccharin. As Thomas Jefferson once said, "In matters of principle, stand like a rock. In matters of taste, move with the current".

Style . . . current or elegant manner or mode of expression in art, design, or dress; distinction, excellence, originality, and character in any form of artistic or literary expression. Students at West Potomac certainly have a distinctive manner in fashion matters. Levi's, rugby shirts and baggy sweaters are all-time favorites. Long johns, boxer shorts, Reeboks, black boots, and stirrup pants are comfy casuals. Most current: patterns from plaid to paisley to palm trees; textures from cables and ribbed knits to linens and lace; accessories from brooches and fake pearls to scarves and funky socks. Preferred labels are: Guess, Gucci, Esprit, Liz Claiborne, Calvin Klein, Banana Republic, and Ralph Lauren. And, of course, there's always Inspector 12 and Made In The U.S.A. Yet there's always that Monday morning when W.P. sweats are simply the easiest. Bloomingdales and Woodies carry all the latest, and Britches, Cedar Post, Benetton and Brooks are other popular shops. Forenza is also a favorite, specializing in flowered jeans and other prints. "In" hairstyles are angular, curly, or bobbed. Generally: shirts oversized, pants cropped, sweaters roomy, shoulders padded, shoes flat, and jewelry antique and simulated. Fashions can be classic, casual, bold, dressy, or punk; every student at W.P. has his own unique sense of personal style.

IT'S Snowing

Snow. Bing Crosby sang about it, Jack London wrote about it, and West Potomac students are obsessed by it. The mere mention of the sight of those little white crystals is enough to send them into fits. "Are we going to get out of school?" is suddenly the only sentence in their vocabulary. Any pretence of doing homework is abandoned, since tomorrow will be free if school is closed. Of course, the possibility of an alternate occurrence is dismissed, if considered at all.

If the student gets lucky and school actually is closed, the phone line begins to buzz. Neighborhood football games and sledding are among the favorite snow day pastimes, along with shopping and sleeping late. The homework left until today is forgotten or ignored until tomorrow.

Of course, when June rolls around and all those snow days have to be made up by everyone but Seniors, those days of laziness are bitterly bemoaned. It appears, however, that snow days are becoming obsolete, replaced by hurricane days, heat days, bomb threat days and flood days. If the snow day is ever eradicated from existence, it will be sorely missed.

After hearing that school would be let our one hour early, enthusiastic students head home for a longawaited winter vacation.

Student drivers are often uneasy about the road hazards that snow brings.

"Is it snowing? Is it really snowing?" question excited students. "Those little white crystals" boost Heather Smith's spirits.

A MATTER OF HABIT

Wendy Wolverine has a big History test today. She is nervous, biting her nails every few minutes while she frantically goes over her notes. When Suzie Senior asks her about her nail-biting, Wendy flushes, and replies hastily, "I don't bit my nails all the time!" She then begins to twirl her hair, a mannerism that seldom shows up unless Wendy is lying.

A look at Wendy's History class, after the test has been given out, shows a wave of movement. As each student receives the test, the gum-chewing and pencil-gnawing go into high gear. Johnny Junior plays with his pen as he reads the multiple choice questions. Polly Potomac cracks her knuckles, musing on the essay discussion. All of these students would deny that these students would deny that these quirks were habits, but an observation of Wendy's History class tomorrow (or next week, or next month) would prove them wrong.

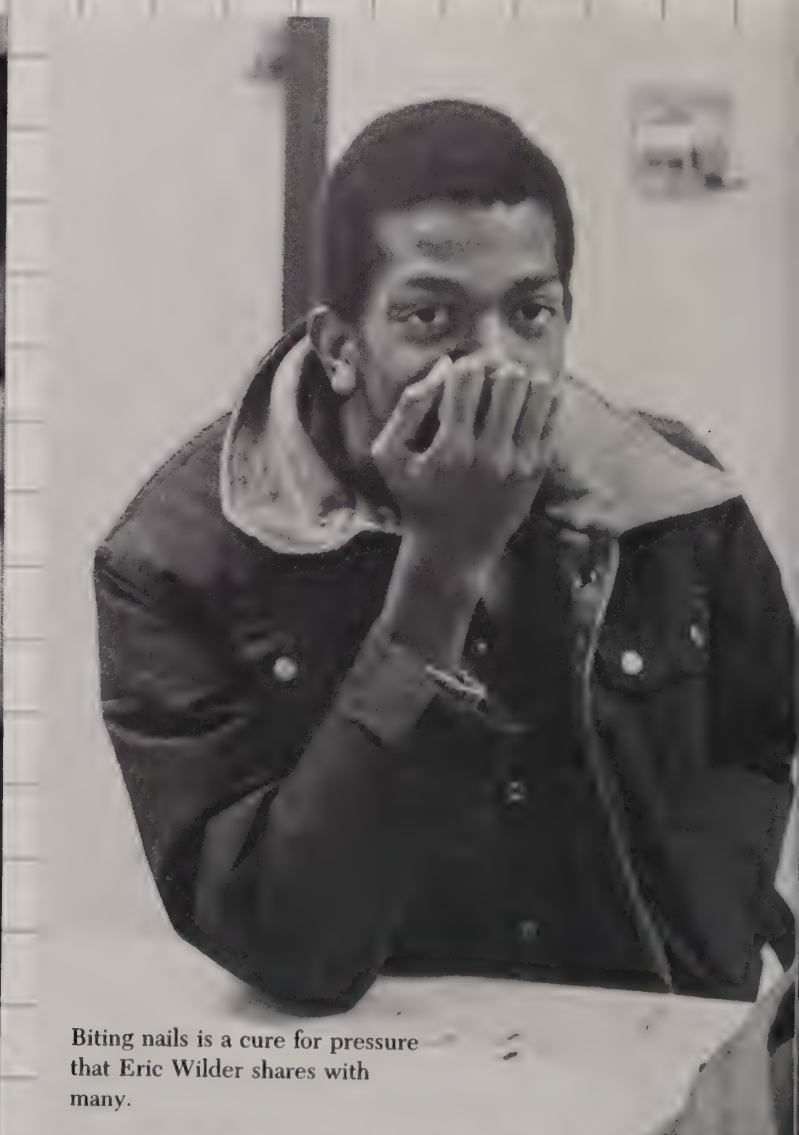

Talking with hands, jiggling feet, or twirling bangs, it's all the same — it's a matter of habit.

Even a pen cap becomes a unique toy to Mike Barnes in a geometry class.

Earrings become more than just jewelry to Brenda Lasker as she twists them in circles.

Biting nails is a cure for pressure that Eric Wilder shares with many.

After skipping breakfast, Lindsey Roberts is hungry for her raspberry-flavored pen.

In a dull class, Peter Guarraia resorts to cracking his knuckles to keep from falling asleep.

A Trident gum wrapper is as fascinating as the gum itself for Lisa Palermino.

"Maybe if I tease and pull my hair enough it will look right," says Celia Everett to Lana May on the night of the Homecoming dance.

Excuses, Exc

Every parent is bound to say, "I never did that when I was growing up!" But everyone breaks a rule during teenage years. Once the damage has been done, the skillful excuse-maker must devise an explanation for why he did what he wasn't supposed to do. Here are some of the most creative, and not the most believable, alibis available for use in West Potomac and environs.

"No, really Dale, I swear! These little green men wearing Mount Vernon letter jackets held laser guns to my head and forced me to take them to McDonald's. I didn't want to go, but what could I do?"

"No, Dad, I have no idea why all those eggs are all over the car, but I did hear a huge flock of chickens fly over the house last night."

"You'll never believe this, but the reason

I'm two hours late is because I had an inner ear disturbance and I forgot our address."

"My lab partner dripped acid on my term paper during Chemistry and bleached out all the writing."

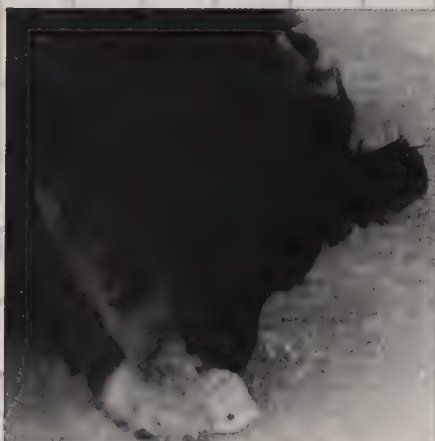

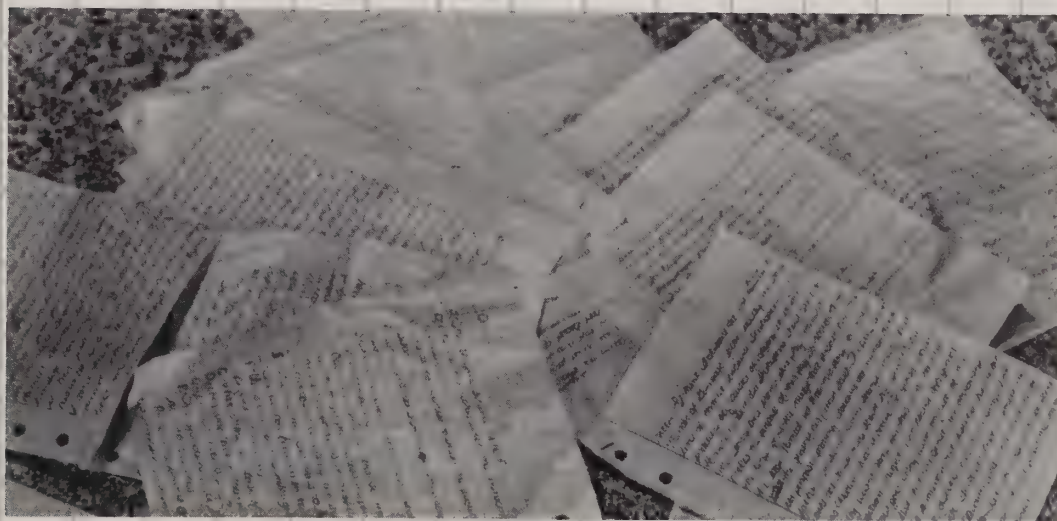

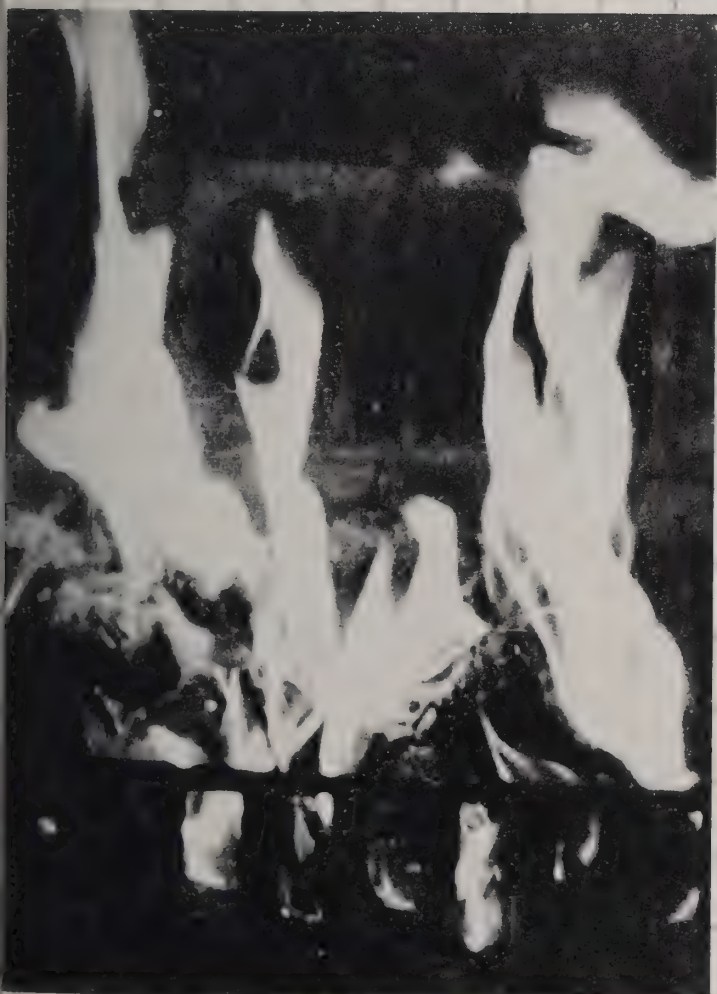

The habitual excuse-maker will find that having a set of "perfab pleas" is handy when caught in the act, especially in homework matters.

"But seriously, I'm legal this time!" exclaims Joanne Juger as West Potomac's "Miami Vice" team Dale Eaton and Don Micheletti snag yet another early leaver.

EVENTS OF 1986

WEATHER WREAKS HAVOC WITH CLASS TIME

Events of 1985-1986 were full of triumph and tragedy, hopes and fears. Disasters were both natural and man-made. Long-simmering South Africa erupted in violence, while a volcano, earthquakes, air crashes and famine killed thousands more. Yet there were also reasons for hope — an unprecedented gush of charity fund-raising, a charismatic new leader in the Kremlin and a summit meeting that held, if not answers, promise. Month by month, headlines ranged from shocking to incredible, exciting, to inspiring.

In June of 1985, the hunt for the most wanted war criminal intensified in Sao Paulo, Brazil. Was the 1979 drowning victim really Josef Mengele, the Nazi doctor responsible for sending 400,000 to their deaths at Auschwitz? After weeks of study, the scientists reached a unanimous verdict: the skeleton was indeed that of the infamous "Angel of Death." Finally, after 40 years, case closed. June was also the month when Palestinian terrorists hijacked TWA flight 847. Two Lebanese men menaced the 153 on board and murdered an American Navy man, recognized by his haircut. One poised flight attendant stanchied the bloodshed and emerged a heroine: Uli Derickson. The Czechoslovakian — born woman shielded a passenger from blows, pleaded for the hostages' lives and defused violence with her calm. Finally, the terrorists released the passengers before disappearing into the Middle East.

West Germany's Boris Becker became the youngest man ever to win the Wimbledon championship on July 7. Later that month the Live Aid concerts were held, in Philadelphia and London. The concerts featured the biggest names in the music scene and raised millions of dollars to help feed starving Ethiopians.

August saw another plane crash — this time on a Dallas runway. On this Delta Air Lines jet, 137 people died, making 1985 the worst year ever for deaths caused by accidents in the air. August also saw the opening of two brand-new high schools in Fairfax County — Thomas Jefferson High School for Science and Technology, and, of course, West Potomac High School.

September brought the "H's": heat, Halley's Comet, and hurricanes. The heat in Northern Virginia was unbearable; 98-degree-plus days became common. Students were released from school early on several occasions — to jump in the pool, sip a cool Sprite, or to retire to cool, air-conditioned homes. Hurricanes Elena and Gloria both made their presence known with torrential rains, and . . . more school closings. On September 1, seven engineers in the Atlantic discovered the 73-year-old remains of the great ship, the Titanic.

October began with heat, gradually cooling to autumn. On October 7, the Italian cruise ship "Achille Lauro" was hijacked at sea by PLO terrorists. After the passengers were released, it was discovered that the terrorists had ruthlessly slaughtered Leon Klinghoffer, an elderly, wheelchair-bound American traveling with his wife. With American fury at its peak, the United States Navy intercepted a plane, which had departed from Egypt, on which it was believed that the Arab hijackers were flying. The terrorists were indeed on the plane, and became transformed immediately from victorious criminals to captured prisoners, subject to western justice. October also saw the arrest and deportation of the controversial religious cult leader Rajneesh.

On Election Day 1985, the winning Democratic Baliles-Wilder-Terry ticket was a historic one. Douglas Wilder (Lieutenant Governor) became the first black man, and Mary Sue Terry (Attorney General) the first woman, to be elected to a statewide office in Virginia since Reconstruction. On November 4, the confused whale Humphrey finally found his way back to the Pacific Ocean. After defecting to the United States in July, KGB agent Vitaly Yurchenko returned to Russia on November 6. Soon afterward, Washington was sent into a frenzy with the arrival of the Prince and Princess of Wales, here to open the Treasure Houses of Britain exhibit at the National Gallery. Five dozen of America's most public personalities were invited to the White House dinner for Charles and Di — a "private" occasion, according to hostess

Nancy Reagan. Many West Potomac students were able to see Princess Di when she visited J.C. Penney's at Springfield Mall. Also in November, President Reagan met Soviet General Secretary Gorbachev at the Summit meeting in Geneva, Switzerland. The meeting seemed to be very successful, and plans were made for another conference. Another hijacking in November had more disastrous results for the hijackers. This time an Egyptian plane was hijacked, and the Egyptians responded with a massive rescue attempt that some said was overzealous, as Prince Charles and Princess Diana's visit stirred Washington up in a frenzied whirl of excitement.

Horn of Dilemma: parking lot goat or mythical unicorn?

Sports, Soda and Space

many passengers were killed along with terrorists.

Natural disasters also dominated the world scene in the last months of 1985. A dam burst in Italy, killing 200, and a landslide in Puerto Rico took 150 more lives. A Mexico earthquake left 5000 dead and 150,000 homeless. Then in November Colombia's 17,176-foot Nevado del Ruiz erupted, leaving more than 20,000 dead or missing in mud and ashes. Then, in California, devastating mud slides destroying many homes.

January marked perhaps the gloomiest day for the United States of the decade. The Space Shuttle Challenger, with its seven anticipative astronauts aboard, exploded just 73 seconds after launch, killing the seven. Many West Potomac students were stricken by the news in Canada — as the Ski Club ski trip was occurring simultaneously. Americans were shocked, amazed, stunned. But the American space program will in no way be terminated; the astronauts' adventurous ways will be picked up by others, and space frontiers will continue to expand.

The year 1986 started out as a bad one for dictators. Haiti's Jean-Claude ("Baby Doc") Duvalier and the Phillipines' Ferdinand Marcos were both forced to flee their countries where more democratic governments took over.

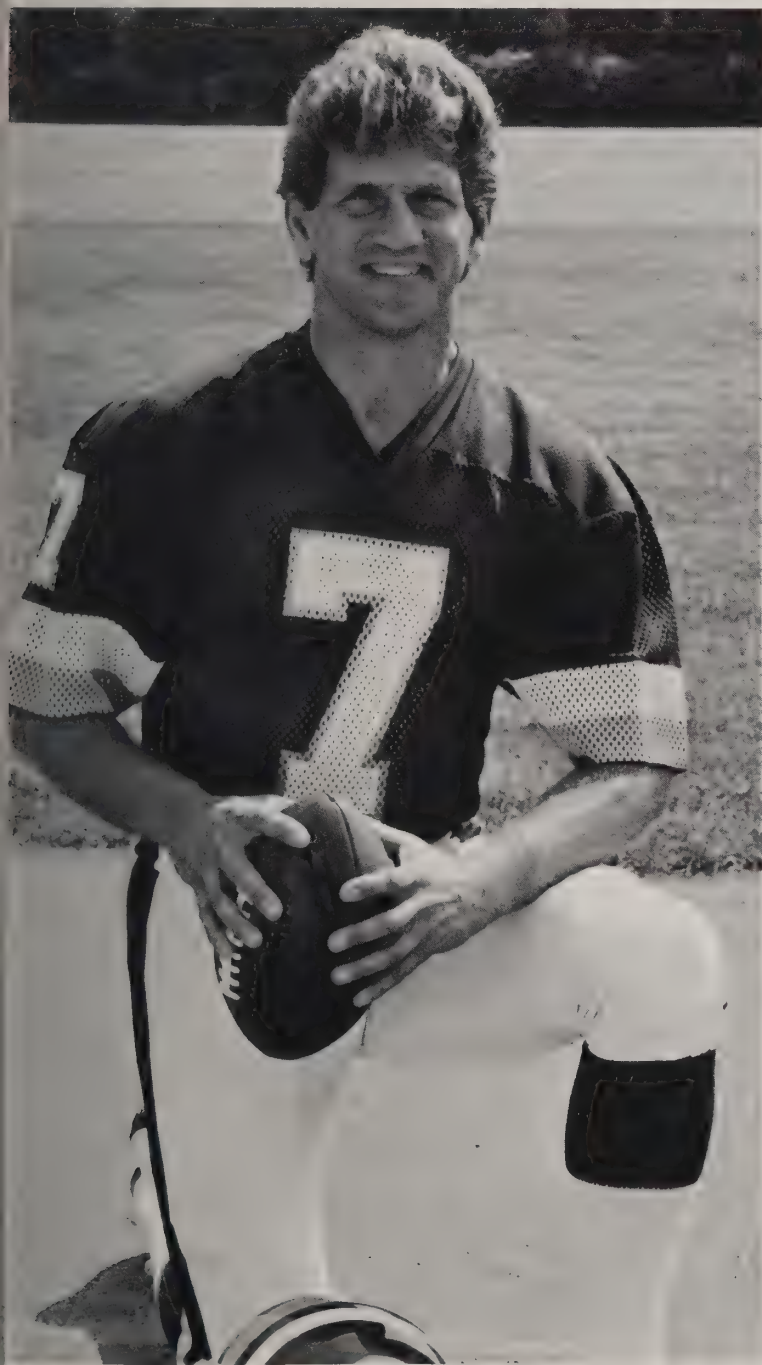

Manute Bol, the Chicago Bears, and Joe Theismann made headlines on the Sports page this year. The tallest player in the NBA was probably called "Shorty" back home; Manute Bol is a mere seven feet six, while his Dinka grandfather was a proud seven feet ten. The spirited Chicago Bears, with a charm all their own, raised money for the city's homeless through "The Super Bowl Shuffle." Defensive lineman William "The Refrigerator" Perry, quarterback Jim McMahon, and running back Walter Payton lead the Bears to their Super Bowl triumph on January 26, 1986. Washington Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann's season ended prematurely when he broke his leg in a November New York Giants game.

The "Coke war" was a battle between classic, diet, cherry, caffeine-free, and new Coke. Before long, supermarkets stocked up with even more kinds of Coke: classic-caffeine-free-diet, new-caffeine-free, new-diet, new-caffeine-free-diet . . .

Milk cartons proclaimed the benefits of calcium in preventing osteoporosis and introduced a campaign to save missing children. The illness and death of Rock Hudson focused world-wide attention on the AIDS threat. And was Sweetheart a unicorn that was found in a back lot, as claimed by Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus, or a goat with its horns grafted together, as claimed by the ASPCA?

In the world of theater, the Cosby Show won an Emmy Award for Best Comedy Series. Miami Vice lead all other competitors, picking up 15 Emmy nominations. Madonna and Sean Penn were married, and began filming movies together. "Back to the Future," "White Nights," "St. Elmo's Fire," and "Witness" were popular movies, and "Out of Africa" and "The Color Purple" were award-winning pictures.

1986 . . . a year of joys, crises, successes, disasters, victories . . . a year to remember.

Injured quarterback Joe Theismann: still in the running for next year?

Fought between classic, cherry, diet, new, caffeine-free and combinations, the undying "Coke war" is a controversial and money-making battle.

WORLD NEWS IN REVIEW

Bloodshed continued to plague South Africa. The violence went unreported, however, when the white minority South African government prohibited all news cameramen from covering the riots. The black South African Bishop Tutu was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for his efforts to bring justice to this troubled land.

Oil prices plummeted to less than a dollar a gallon as a result of the worldwide oil glut. Too much oil and low oil prices were good news to the ears of most of the world; but many oil workers soon found themselves jobless.

For the United States, it was time to retaliate against terrorism around the world. The bombing of the disco club, "La Belle," in West Berlin, resulted in what President Reagan described as "an act of self-defense." U.S. officials said the administration had responded to "irrefutable evidence" linking the bombing of the disco to Muammar Kaddafi's terrorist teams. The United States bombed Tripoli, the capital of Libya, on April 14, 1986. The immediate purpose of the plan, to punish Kaddafi for his terrorist activities, was achieved, but many around the world questioned the long-range value of America's retaliation.

The Chernobyl nuclear accident on April 26, 1986 was as bewildering as it was frightening. A 1,000-megawatt power plant suddenly became a fountain of death. The breakdown and explosion posed a riddle for physicists and engineers and a nightmare for those affected. Where did the disaster begin, why didn't anyone stop it, and how many will suffer or die because of it? The Soviet Union's closed society did all it could to suppress the answers.

May 3, 1986: It was NASA's first launch since the Challenger disaster and it seemed like a sure thing. When it went up from Cape Canaveral that evening, all systems were normal. Then, 71 seconds into flight, the Delta's main engine mysteriously shut down. Coming just three weeks after an Air Force Titan 34D rocket exploded seconds after liftoff, the Delta failure raised yet again the troubling question: what's wrong with the U.S. space program?

The Chernobyl disaster represented a loss of political face for Moscow. But it also posed a broader issue. In less than five months, the United States has lost a shuttle, and the Soviet Union, Chernobyl. Scientific arrogance and national pride were involved in both disasters, tempting some to cover up and others to lose faith in the "god of technology." The challenge now is to learn from catastrophes and to correct the errors that produce them—not to give in to the fear they inspire.

At the Tokyo economic summit starting May 4, 1986, economic issues seemed far less pressing in contrast to terrorism and nuclear accidents. The Reagan administration hoped to use the summit to gain allied support for its campaign against Libya and international terrorism. Then the nuclear accident at Chernobyl seemed likely to play a major role in the proceedings. In addition to these issues, the Reagan administration feared a major crisis threatening the world economy: recession triggered by a shrinking trade.

President Reagan and Soviet General Secretary Gorbachev seemed to have gotten along "just fine" at the summit meeting.

In Memoriam

Crewmembers were (front row) astronauts Michael J. Smith, Francis R. (Dick) Scobee, and Ronald E. McNair; (back row) Ellison S. Onizuka (first Japanese-American in space), teacher Christa McAuliffe (Teacher in Space Project), Gregory Jarvis (representing Hughes Company), and Judith A. Resnik.

January 28, 1986. West Potomac students were enjoying the last day of a four-day weekend. Suddenly, the news was broadcast on televisions and radios everywhere: the space shuttle had exploded.

The shock was immediate. Shuttle launches had become commonplace, almost insignificant in the minds of the American public. This launch, however, was different. The Challenger was carrying Christa McAuliffe, the first teacher in space.

She was someone we could all identify with; to West Potomac students she was any teacher that had personally touched us and made a difference in our lives.

McAuliffe was the focus of the tragedy and the sorrow, but the other astronauts also had great meaning to Americans. As one columnist said, "They included a black, a woman, a Jew, a Vietnam veteran, an Oriental, and even a man named Smith. They were America."

A poster was placed in the entrance hall to Springbank so students could express their emotions about the tragedy. Many took the opportunity with heartfelt sincerity. "A great ship asks deep waters," one wrote. Others quoted from the Bible, some quoted Latin, and some even composed original poems. The poster was sent to the astronauts' families in care of NASA.

More than anything, the shuttle crew is mourned because of its strength and bravery. The members of the crew stand as invaluable role models for young people not to let adversity and danger keep them from progress and a challenge. That's the way the crew of the Challenger would want it.

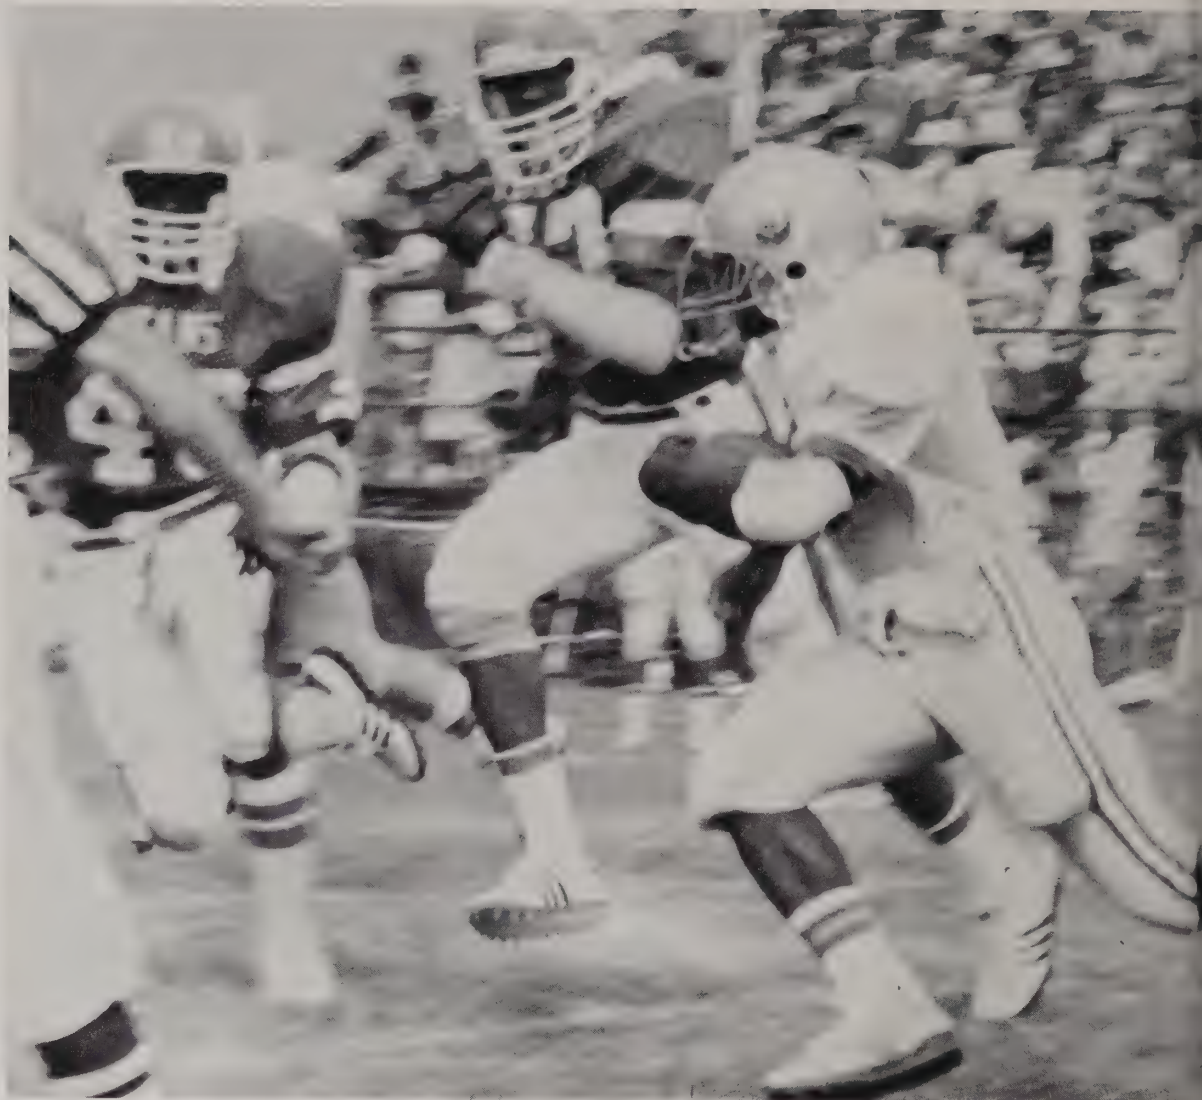

VARSITY FOOTBALL BEGINS

The West Potomac 1985 varsity football team started a tradition that does indeed live up to the slogan "The Tradition Starts Now."

Co-district champions Wolverines and Mt. Vernon both waited to see which would go to the region playoffs against Northern District champion T.C. Williams. After their first season loss in a district game to Mt. Vernon 14-6, the Wolverines' post-season play seemed undecided, although they were ranked in the top 15 Metropolitan area for several weeks.

Eventually, the "power points" added up in the Wolverines' favor; they advanced to the regional semi-finals. The fourteenth ranked Wolverines lost their second game of the season to the fifth ranked T.C. Williams.

The Wolverines ended their season with a record of 9-1.

MR. MEIER

Varsity football coach Mr. Meier feels that the team's success was attributed to an outstanding group of seniors who supplied the leadership that was essential. "We were hoping for a winning season and a challenge for the district title. We exceeded our goals. A 9-1 season — one step away from perfection." Coach Meier feels that it will be a big challenge to meet up to these standards in the future, but he hopes to establish the finest football program in the state.

WE'VE GOT SPIRIT HOW

The varsity cheerleaders are responsible for generating enthusiasm and school spirit at athletic contests and other school sponsored events. The squad is comprised of twenty girls, who competed with 35 other girls to gain their spots.

The cheerleaders never really had a summer vacation, because cheerleading practice began less than three weeks after school ended. In August the squad traveled to Millersville, Pennsylvania — along with squads from over 60 other schools — to attend cheerleading camp and competition. They performed well, earning first place ribbons for all events and placing among the top seven squads of all school participating.

"The hard work at cheerleading camp has really paid off, because it has made us better cheerers and made us better friends", commented squad member Deona Pettit.

The sponsors are Mrs. Porter and Ms. Thompson, with Beth Lancaster and Wendy Welsh as captains.

BOUT YOU?

West Potomac's Junior Varsity cheerleaders were kept busy during the school year. Try-outs were a time for nervousness and competition. The squad put in a lot of hours practicing the cheers that look so easy to the rest of us. All this hard work paid off, though, as the cheerleaders fired up the Wolverines during football games, basketball games and pep rallies.

Jenny and Debbie give a high kick to the J.V. team for the victory over Hayfield.

FRESHMAN CHEERLEADING

Being a Freshman cheerleader wasn't easy. The freshman girls had to face the jitters of having to develop their own style and start a new tradition for West Potomac. Besides cheering at the freshman football games, the cheerleaders had to sell football programs and cheer at pep rallies and basketball games.

The 1985 Junior Varsity field hockey team started off their season well by winning their first four games against Hayfield 2-0, Falls Church 3-0, Lee 2-0, and Edison 5-1. They tied Robinson 1-1, in their toughest game. Players having exceptional skills were Robin Ebhardt and Julie Ball.

VARSITY FIELD HOCKEY STICKS

Going to state was the goal of the 1985 girls field hockey team — a goal that was finally accomplished through dedication and hard work. The team ended up tied for the district title with Lee and had a playoff game in which Ann Rosamond scored the winning goal to win, 1-0.

The first game of regionals against Langely was a win of 2-0. Again Rosamond scored along with an outstanding goal by Lisa Morris. In the semi-finals with Woodson, Rosamond came through with another goal, to win the game 1-0. The girls became champions of the region as junior Marcia Ehle stuck in a goal against South Lakes near the end of the second half to win 1-0.

In the State finals against Cox, a Cox forward shot the game's only score past goalie Katherine Perry to win the game 1-0, and take the championship.

It was a great season," stated Mary Ebhardt. "We all wish we could have won state, but we are also very happy to have gotten as far as we did."

Coach Carol Horton stated, "The team did great this year and I'm proud."

GIRLS TENNIS SWINGS INTO

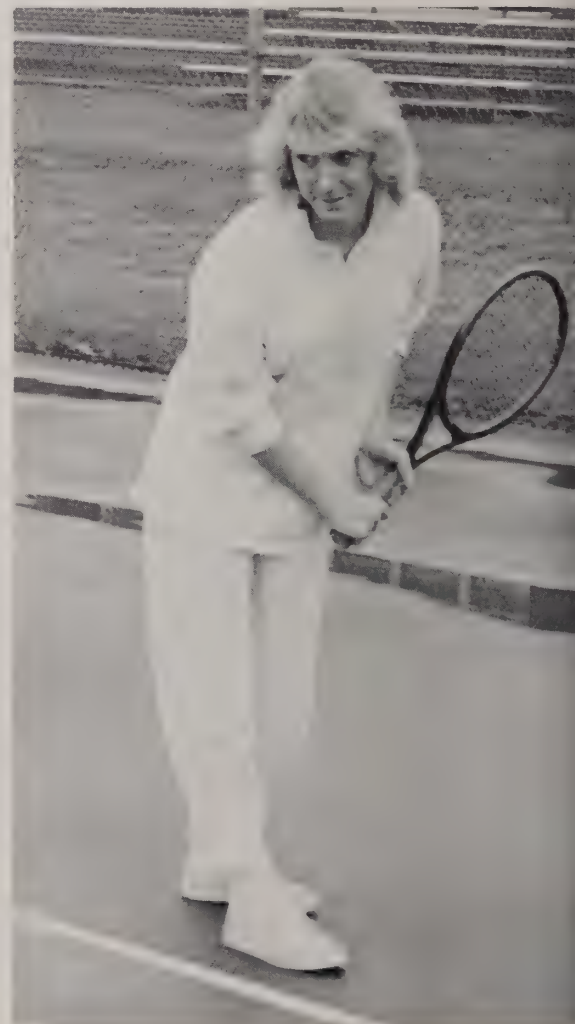

The girls tennis team ended their season with a record of 5 wins and 3 losses. Especially strong and constant performers were seniors Janice Nedbal, Kim Shaffer, and Megan Fogarty. All three played in the district tournament. Nedbal and Shaffer won first round victories, but lost in the second round.

The team believes their losses were the result of injuries to top players Zena Dajani and Cindy Lasker. "Our injuries left everybody filling spots that they weren't ready for," said coach Adolfus Graves.

GOLF TEAM DRIVES TO DISTRICT

The first West Potomac golf team won the Gunston District Championship with a record of 6-2.

Senior Steve Bryan commented about the team, "It took a while for the team to come together as a unit, but as each match was played we seemed to improve." Their record illustrates this: They lost the first two matches to teams that "they should have beat" but they then won the next four. Junior Rick Vanderhyde agrees with Bryan as he stated, "We got off to a slow start, but we soon got better."

A lot of credit is due to coach Bob Tolley. He is well liked by the team and according to Fecchio, "He's just an awesome guy!"

The girls finished second in the district, and individually, Gabrielle Pohlmann placed tenth and Sara Burke placed twelfth in the regional competition. These two girls advanced to state where Gabrielle placed sixth and Sara placed fifteenth.

The junior varsity basketball team was defeated in their season opener, 71-40. The score was tied at half and the wolverines were expected to win, but mistakes cost them the game. As the team gained on the court experience, they bettered their record. They went on to defeat McLean, Falls Church, Robinson, Jefferson, Edison, and Hayfield. Guards Andre Boyd and Frank Fannon teamed up to score points throughout these games.

The freshman basketball team finished third in the district with a fairly even record of 9-10. The team won its season opener against Hammond with a score of 50-49. Center Billy Richardson contributed an excellent performance and 16 points to the come-from-behind effort. The team continued to do well with wins over Oakton, Lake Braddock, and Lee.

Although the girls basketball team placed third in the district, winning was not out of the squad's reach. They lost the tournament championship game to Mt. Vernon 49-45. The team was defeated in their season opener against T.C. Williams 27-54. But things turned around for the Lady Wolverines. After working together and putting out a better effort, the team defeated Falls Church 47-43 in overtime. The team continued this effort with big wins over West Springfield, Edison, Jefferson, and Hayfield. Lisa Lindley was the leading scorer with 14 points per game. Lindley and Jane Greenleese were chosen as all district members.

Especially strong in the lower and middle weight classes, the Wolverines proved to be superior in the district.

In the first competition of the season, the varsity team won the Annandale Invitational Tournament as they beat seven other area teams. Tournament winners were Mike Lindsey at the 138 pound weight class and Mike Smith at 155.

The team went on to win the Gunston District Championship by a margin of 216 to 171.5. Winning the district were Mike Smith, David Landrith, Matt McCarton, Mike Petritich, Marc Reichelderfer, and Tom Ruff.

The team continued their undefeated stroke by placing exceptionally well at the Old Dominion University Invitational. The boys finished third over all and the girls placed fourth. District meets proved to be a strong point for the team, with a girls record of 7-0 and the boys 5-2. During the District Invitational, West Potomac came out on top with a District Championship for the girls team and a second place finish for the boys.

The diving team had its turns and falls, but with the help of a new coach, they seemed to fare well during the rest of the season. The diving team consisted of Terri Lukes, Caroline Duncker, Julie Ungerleider, Francis Draper, and Keith Vaughn.

GYMNASTICS LEAPS INTO ACTION

Individual improvement was the slogan for the 1986 gymnastics team. Although the team as a whole did not have much success, individuals showed their strengths. Disappointment was commonplace for the team, which was supposed to compete in six meets, including the district competition. They lost their first four meets, one by two tenths of a point to Edison. "We should have not lost all the meets. We could have beaten Mt. Vernon and Edison," said coach Merline Ballard.

Strong gymnasts included Deena Pettit on the beam, Daliene Butler on the vault and Khamla Somphanh on the floor.

VARSITY AND J.V. BASEBALL

Experience is on the side of West Potomac's varsity baseball team. Out of the team's seventeen players, nine are returning seniors: Dean McKnight, Doug Britt, Geoff Broughton, Kurt Farmer, John Holland, Chris Hummel, Randy McCray, Derek Taylor, and Robert Toney. The remaining players are eight talented juniors. Also, in the team's favor is coach Ted Colna who has been coaching for at least twenty years.

Although the team did not start off their season well by losing twice to Annandale, they soon turned around by defeating Yorktown 18-9. The team is expected to do well throughout the season, possibly winning the district title and more. "We have enough talent to place well in the district and in the region," commented Robert Toney.

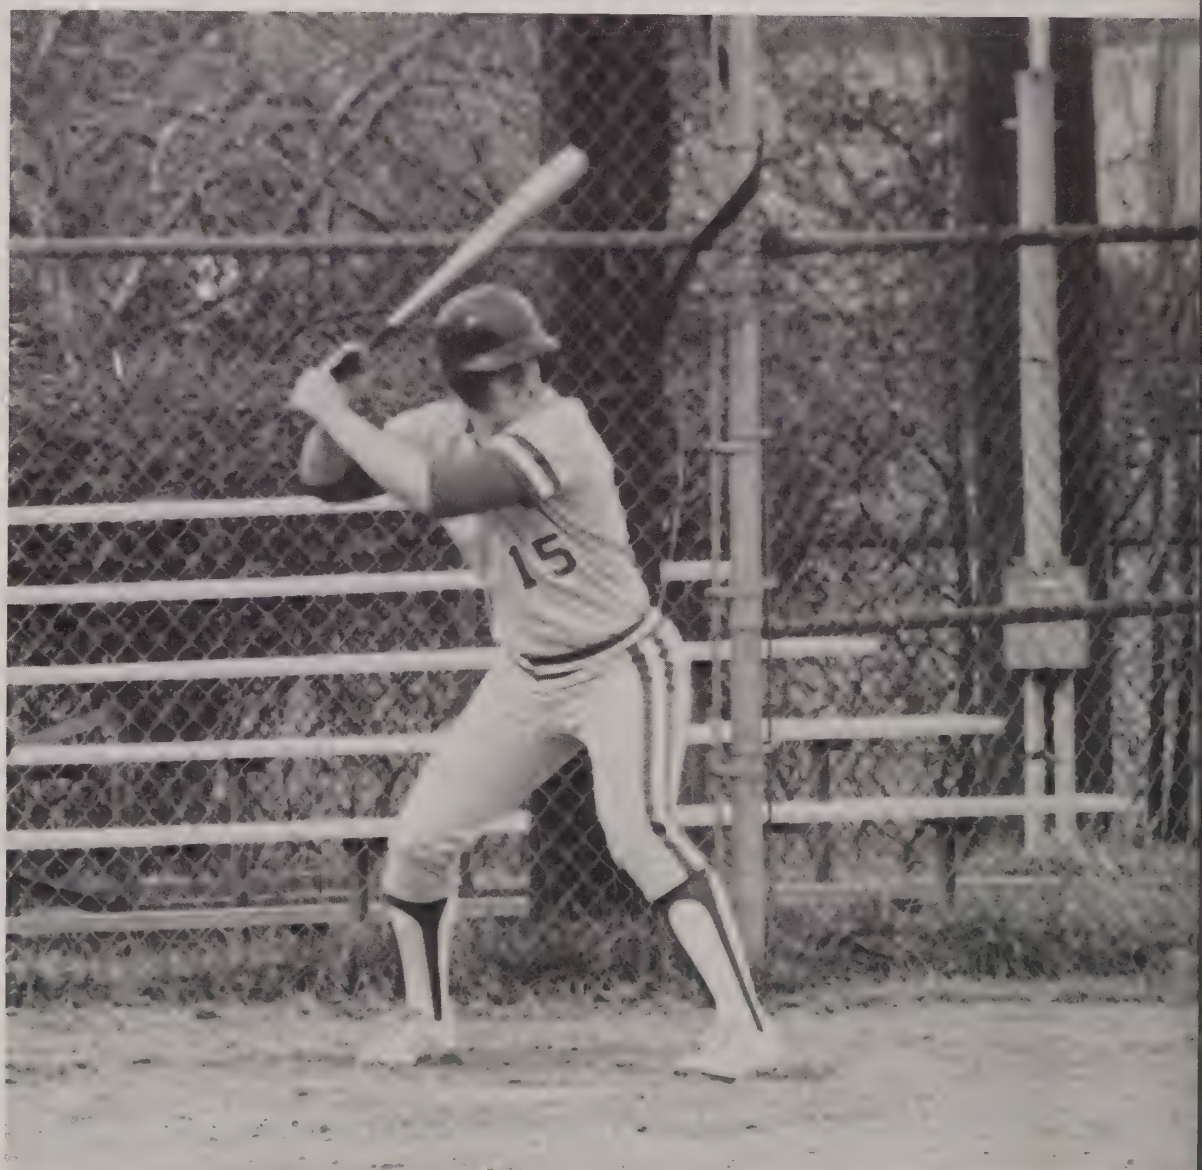

For the 1986 season the junior varsity squad will consist of two teams because so many exceptional players tried out. Each team will consist of sixteen players, one team being mainly freshmen and the other sophomores and juniors. Both these squads are expected to have a successful season.

Exceptional players making the team are: Michelle Annino, Michelle Gussie, Debbie Geck, Ann Rosamond, Libby Jeans, and Janice Nedbal.

But the competition is not over for these girls. They will have to play well, especially against Mt. Vernon and Edison in order to win the district title they are hoping for.

BOYS' VARSITY AND JV SOCCER

The boys' varsity and junior varsity soccer teams are both looking ahead to a promising season. During tryouts, many talented players came out for practice. But eventually cuts had to be made, and the varsity and JV teams had to be narrowed down to twenty one players each. A few exceptional seniors making the team are Mike Rosenfeld, Robbie Pugh, John Windish, and Matt Piepenburg.

One of the strong points of the team is its talented coaches. The varsity boys' coach is Bob Gerber, and Gary Relton is the coach of JV. Gerber is very serious about soccer and feels the team will be facing some tough competition, but hopes the team will do well this season.

"I think our varsity team, if we work together as a team, will win the district title," commented varsity halfback Monjay Christner.

The varsity girls' soccer team will do extremely well this season. "Our big advantage is experience. We have a lot of returning varsity players because of the merger," says Coach Horton.

The varsity team will concentrate on offense because most of the team is offense oriented. The defense won't be that strong except for the goalie. Coach Horton comments, "We have two very good goalies, sophomore Nikki Grey and Senior Lori Grant."

The JV team is also expected to do very well. There are many young upcoming players, and "five exceptionally strong freshmen," according to Horton.

Coach Horton keeps a watchful eye on her team.

Sandy Tipton makes her way down the field.

BOYS' TENNIS VOLLEYS FOR

The 1986 boys' tennis team swung into action this season by placing third in the Great Falls Invitational Tournament. This promising team consists of the top three or four singles players and the top two or three doubles teams.

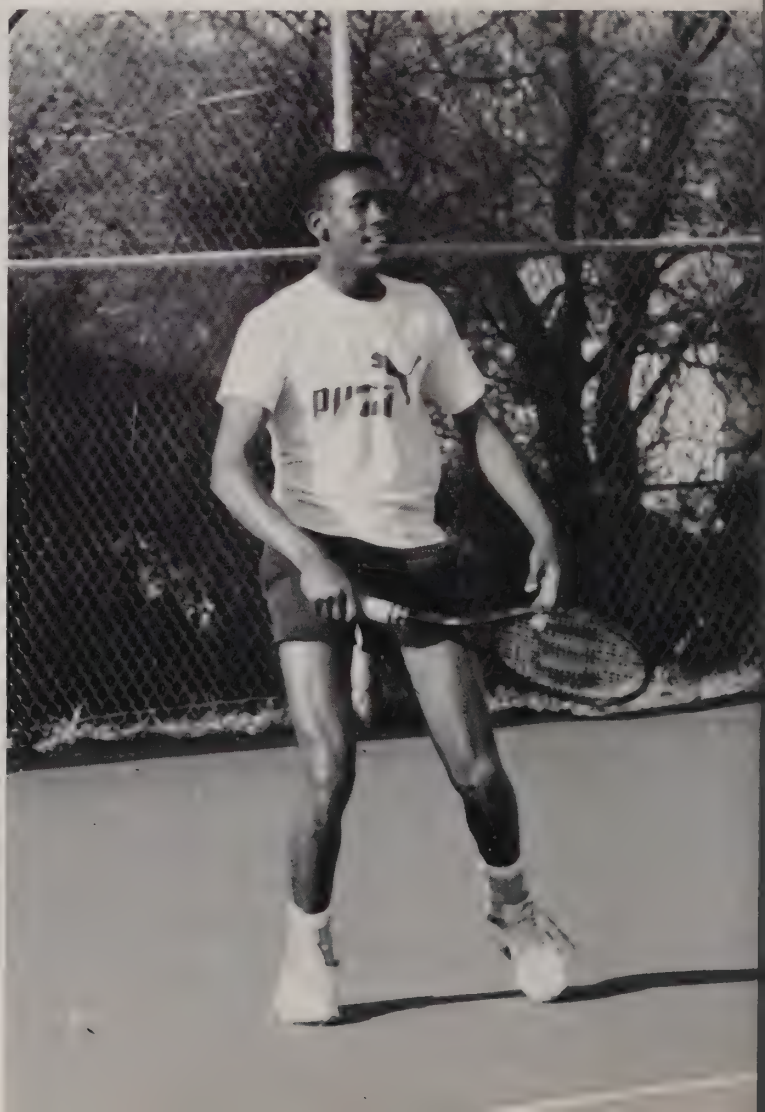

But the team was so competitive within itself, that a double elimination draw had to be used just to determine who made the team. The players who made the top six are (respectively): Adam Joyce, Tom Kryssa, David Willsey, David Fox, Ronnie Prater, and Stephen Karlisch. But the number seven player, Robert Jordan and the number eight player, James Rosenfeld, are still close to breaking into the top six.

The team is expected to win the district title although Lee an Mt. Vernon could give them heavy competition. "From positions one through six, we have a very solid team. Not many teams are going to be strong enough to beat us. I think we will thrive on the lower singles positions," commented Adam Joyce.

Stephen Karlisch hits a forehand.

One hundred and fifty members strong, the spring track team is looking forward to winning the district title and placing well in the regional competition. Already, the girls' team is ranked first in the district and the boys' team is ranked third. To pull up their ranking, the boys' team will have to work hard at beating Hayfield and Mt. Vernon. The team warmed up for their season with a scrimmage against Garfield and Woodbridge and by participating in the Harringer's Relay competition.

Spring track is a combination of running events and field events. Running events consist of hurdles; 100, 200, and 400 dash; 800 run; 1 and 2 mile runs, and relays. Field events consist of the shotput, discus, long jump, triple jump, high jump, and the pole vault.

"I think both teams will do well in districts. We have a lot of young people, but if they continue with track, we should have a successful team in years to come," commented team member Angie Comer.

CREW TEAM ROWS ON THE

Crew is a continuation of the most intense Olympic sport. Stamina, strength, skill, and timing are all important. In order for a boat to row well, a great amount of power must be applied to the oar with impeccable technique, each rower making the same motions at the same time.

The Crew team practices year round, training on the water in the fall, in the weight room and on the track in the winter, and back on the water in the spring. Regattas are held every weekend, starting in late March and successful boats have an opportunity to compete on a national and international level.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

The Student Government Association plays a vital role in the formation of West Potomac High School this year. The SGA is comprised of SGA officers, student forum representatives, and Student Advisory Council members.

The SAC, Student Advisory Council, is comprised of five students elected by the student body to represent them in dealing with the administration. The SAC members in 1985-1986 are: Nick Goldfarb, Beth Lancaster, Marianne Jedrzewski, Tae Lim, and Ron Reeves.

The SGA officers and SAC members together comprised the Executive Council — the group that governed. The remainder of the Student Government Association is made up of the Student Forum — consisting of representatives from each homeroom.

SGA President Mike Rosenfeld and SGA co-president Nikki Rivera lead the student government through various activities — including a major leadership conference held in November at Prince William Forest Park.

In short, the SGA is the student's voice at West Potomac — a new tradition and one that will endure.

ASSOCIATION LEADS THE WAY

RETREAT PROVES A SUCCESS

The first task of West Potomac's new student government this year was to help the merger start off right.

Elected and unofficial leaders from all walks of West Potomac life participated in the first school leadership retreat in October. We all agreed that the merger had gone more smoothly than any one had expected and that West Potomac was off to a fine start with a bright future ahead of it. The next big task was to take charge of Homecoming. Organizing class floats, parades, the bonfire, and the Homecoming Dance.

The Student Government's main goal for the year is to educate students about their government, to involve as many as possible in school activities, and to begin a tradition of strong student government that will continue to grow at W.P.H.S.

Jim Rosenfeld, Tae Lim, and Jack Hoggard get their point across to each other.

KEYS

You saw them at the football games, telling people so efficiently where to park their cars. Those forty guys are the KEYS, a community service group with strong ties to the Kiwanis and the Keyettes.

Under the leadership of president Tom Kiernan and vice-president Randy McCray the Key Club took on many activities this year. During homecoming week they built the bonfire behind Quander Hill. At Christmas they sold Christmas trees with Mount Vernon and the Belle View Kiwanis. Also during the Christmas season, they had a food drive for the needy with their sister organization — the KEYETTES. A bloodmobile and even a dance were also held with the cooperation of the sister keyettes.

Mr. Shortridge, sponsor, said that both Fort Hunt and Groveton were equally represented in the club, and added that "involvement and attendance were not problems this year as they had been in the past."

KEYETTES

The Keyettes do a lot of behind-the-scenes activities. They decorated bleachers at homecoming, wrapped Christmas presents at Beacon Mall, adopted-a-grandparent at Oak Meadows, and held the cake walk at Community Day.

The Keyettes are a service group in close connection with the Kiwanis and the Keys. President Laura Thierry maintained that there were no real problems with the group of sixty girls. "We're all trying to establish a good rapport between the Groveton and Fort Hunt members, as well as with our sponsor, Ms. Pam Robertson."

The Keyettes also held a number of activities with the Keys, their brother organization. The bloodmobile, food and toy drives, and a dance were seen this year, thanks to the two clubs.

HI-Y

The Hi-Y organization keeps the campus and the community service by donating their time and talents to various activities. After the home football games they cleaned the field and surrounding areas of the fan's debris. President Pan Condon also involved the group in the Food Drive to help the needy enjoy the Holiday Season.

In the spring The Tri-Hi-Y and The Hi-Y attend at the Model General Assembly, a convention held for all Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y clubs on the East Coast.

TRI-HI-Y

The Tri-Hi-Y club is a very energetic group of young women dedicated to serving the school and community. This year's group under the direction of president Julie Unglerleider organized the spirit chain during Homecoming, sponsored a Thanksgiving food drive and co-sponsored a Christmas toy drive to help flood victims in West Virginia have a merrier Holiday.

When they're not busy helping others, Tri-Hi-Y members enjoy themselves with parties, meetings, and preparing for a convention in the spring.

LE CLUB DE FRANÇAIS

The West Potomac French Club of 1985-86 was characterized by enthusiasm, according to its members. Karen DiMarco, junior, described the club as "a great multitude of French Club". The ability to speak French didn't matter, because the central purpose of the club was to have fun.

Some of the French club activities this year consisted of soccer matches against rival language clubs, and selling genuine French cuisine on Community Day.

Senior Tae Lim expressed the opinion of most French Club members, saying that "French Club is my kind of club."

EL CLUB DE ESPAÑOL

The Spanish Club kicked off the year with elections and a well received nacho and chile sale during Community Day. The money earned from the sale was placed in a fund for Mexican earthquake victims and sent to Mexico. The club also hosted a pinata party over the winter break. A formal spring dinner was enjoyed by all at a restaurant in town.

The West Potomac German Club started off the year very well with the profits earned from community day. They are involved in such activities as the traditional soccer match against the Latin Club which unfortunately ended in a 3-1 loss and the Mt. Vernon German Club the first game they have ever lost to them. They also planned a Saint Nikolaus Party for a Christmas activity with Mt. Vernon and West Springfield German Clubs. They have the Virginia Organization of German Students Convention at Mt. Vernon High School in March.

SODALITAS LATINA

The Latin Club (more formally known as the Junior Classical League) boasting a membership of over 100, was one of West Potomac's largest clubs this year. It was also one of the most active and varied, with many different activities throughout the year.

The club sponsored trips to local restaurants — in toga! — where they partook of traditional Roman meals. Well fought soccer matches against other language clubs were also sponsored by the club. Several members attended the Virginia Convention of the Junior Classical League, held in November in Roanoke.

With Christina Kim as president and Mrs. Jane Hall as sponsor of the Latin Club, the club enjoyed an active, fruitful year, and set the tone for the Latin club for years to come here at West Potomac.

FRENCH HONOR SOCIETY

The French Honor Society composed of about twenty five members all of whom must maintain a 3.5 average in French and a 3.0 average overall. One major function of the club is tutoring. French Honor Society members are responsible for helping students in lower levels of French who may be having difficulty in the course.

Some of the major activities of the French Honor Society this year included trips to French Restaurants, French plays and a soccer match against cross-language rivals the Spanish Honor Society.

Andrew Beaumier, FHS vice-president had this to say about the success of the society this year: "We've had people that are dedicated and willing to work — that's made all the difference."

SPANISH HONOR SOCIETY

The Spanish Honor Society is not an easy club to join. For admission a student must have at least a 3.5 average in three years of Spanish, and a 3.0 average overall. In addition, students must be proficient in the Spanish language — proficient enough to write a clear, thoughtful set of essays in the language.

Laurel Stucki is President this year. The club is a fairly small one, as would be expected in any organization with such stringent entry requirements. Under Laurel's leadership the club has raised money for the next year's inductions — the Spanish Honor Society's biggest expense.

LATIN HONOR SOCIETY

Despite financial problems that plagued the organization, West Paramour's Latin Honor Society managed to have a productive and eventful year.

The club boasted a membership of almost 30, according to society secretary Katherine Wildman. Members spent time involved in various local community service activities that included visiting homes for the aged and promoting Latin within the community.

The main purpose of LHS is to offer help to students in lower levels of Latin who are having difficulties in the class, states Katherine Wildman. Club members remained after school three days a week in notes and note quizzes.

GERMAN HONOR SOCIETY

The German Honor Society are a group dedicated to excellence in German and the promoting of it. Several members conducted tutorial sessions after school three days a week free of charge. They also joined forces with the German Club on several occasions such as inter-mural rivalries and community day bake sale. Honor Society sponsored various cultural activities which included stage plays and productions.

ART CLUB PROVIDES PAINTERS AND CREATIVITY

The purpose of the Art Club: "To promote the Arts on campus, in the community, and to foster individual artistic growth." This year, the Art Club's promotion consisted of the enormous task of painting Springbank Hall Walls. The theme, thought up by Marissa Brown and the other officers, was none other than arts and involved some creative graphics. Each artist chose their own subjects and design. The job began just after Thanksgiving. All members agreed that it was a great success. Other activities included going to local elementary schools to assist younger artists.

Michelle Burns, Lani Kremmers, And Jack Hoggard discuss work submitted to The Mosaic.

The works of West Potomac's finest artists, writers, poets, and photographers were featured in The Mosaic, the literary arts magazine. Under the leadership of seniors Kim Edens and Jennifer White, and of sponsor and English teacher Lea English the Mosaic presented a well-balanced array of art — from poetry to photographs.

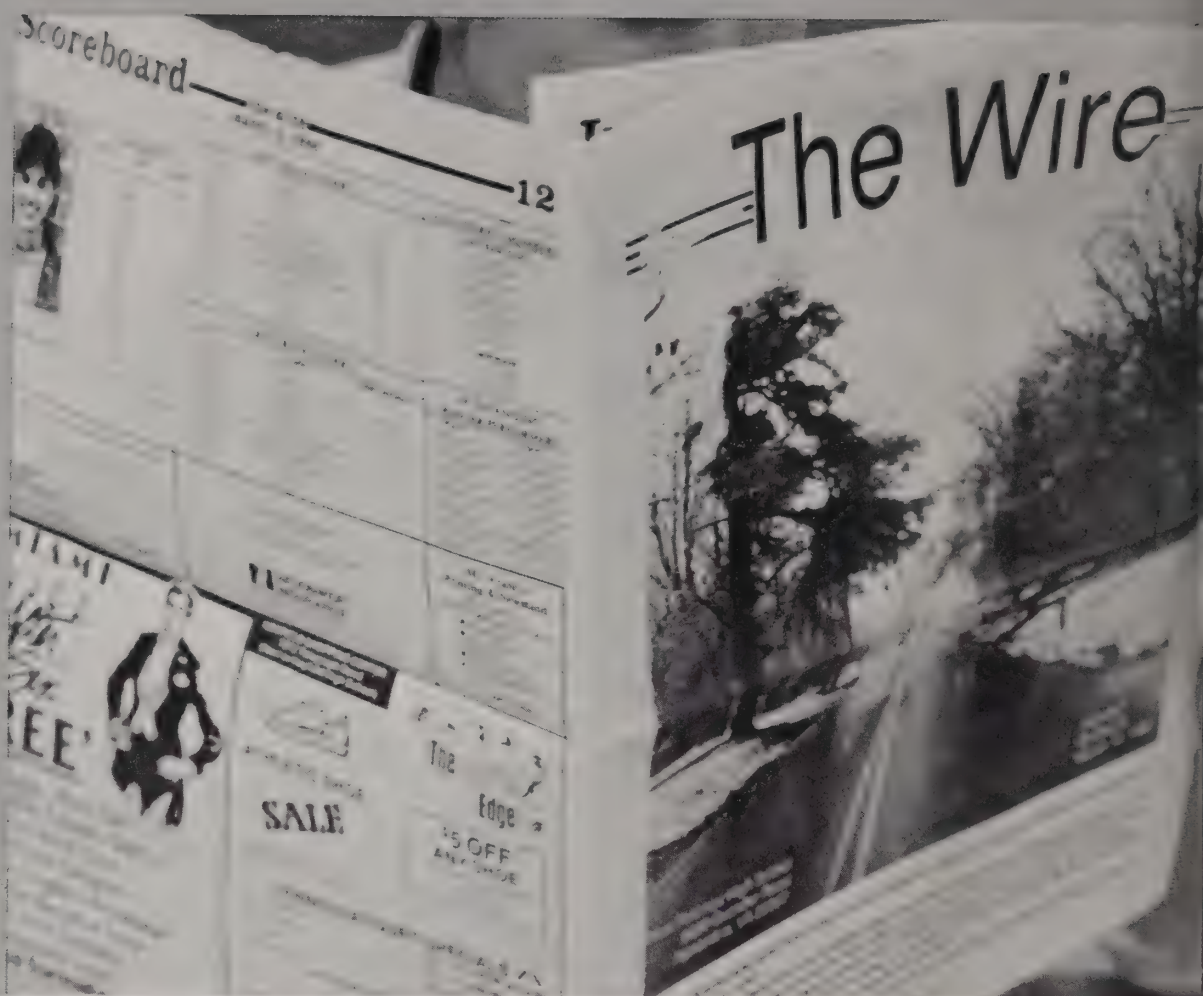

The editorial staff sifted through hundreds of writings and artworks — many submitted, no doubt, for the extra credit promised by many English and Art teachers — before deciding on the best ones to include in the magazine, and special emphasis was made not to include the usual "love poetry", but to focus on all genres of writing and art.

PEP SQUAD LIFTS SPIRITS

You've seen them dancing at Pep Rallies, selling buttons during spirit week, and cheering at athletic games. Who are they? The Pep Squad, of course.

Led by Yolanda Baily, the Pep Squad plays an integral role in the spiring up of the Wolverines. Sophomore Evan Adams describes the role of the Pep Squad as "making sure that everyone is happy and spirited at all school activities".

In addition to school performances the Pep Squad was seen on two television shows spotlighting West Potomac this year.

CLOWNING AROUND

"Clown Corps is West Potomac's most original volunteer group," states member Debbie Epstein. Their purpose is to entertain people and show how much fun drama can be. "We love to make people laugh," says Vice President Emily Townly and President Curry Mills. this year's many activities included performing at elementary schools, birthday parties, hospitals, and for senior citizen groups. Community members might have spotted a few of our clowns in both the Community Day and Homecoming parties.

"It's an exciting change from any other club I've been in," concludes clown Ann Jackson.

During the festive Community Day Parade, Moira Ertel waves to a friend in the crowd.

ESPRIT DE CORPS

Espirit De Corps is "The spirit of the body". According to member Sang Lee, "It's a great asset to this school." It is an original club of only dedicated volunteers.

"Our purpose is to find a worthy cause and help" claims Donna Burton. How do they help? They want to support the spirit and image of West Potomac. This means this year's first priority: Getting flags for the gym, football field, and flag pole. In order to raise money for them, Exprit de Corps planned to sell desk flags, have a semi-formal spring dance, and sell West Potomac's first buttons. All of them want to, "help start traditions."

THE BLACK CULTURAL ALLIANCE

"Building better self images" is BCA's motto. "This club makes us feel more a part of school activities," states assistant secretary Trina Harvey. With the support of their beloved sponsor, Mrs. Graves, West Potomac's minorities get the opportunity to show their incredible talent and diversity by attending colleges, shows in Washington D.C., and appearing on television. Recalls Tiki Mills, "It's a lot of hard work getting ready for the activities and performances".

BCA is also a volunteer group. They make donations to various charities through fund raisers such as fashion shows and doughnut sales. Treasurer Yolanda Bailey says, "It's an outstanding club for the minority students of West Potomac because we learn more about our culture and ourselves."

RIFLE TEAM

The West Potomac Rifle Club bridges the line between a club activity and a varsity sport. The club concentrates its efforts on training students in competitive marksmanship which is fired in three positions: prone, standing, and kneeling. Most of the shooting is done at Fort Belvoir, and the West Potomac Rifle Team, which is selected from club members, can earn varsity letters while competing in the local 12 school Potomac High School Rifle League. Schools from Maryland, Virginia and the District are represented, and the league often produces the High School National Championship team.

The league competition is composed of a full schedule of dual matches, and a season-ending league tournament to which the four top teams and the best individual shooter are invited.

Firing is done on an international target, and the match rules are very similar to those used in intercollegiate (NCAA) and international competition. The team ended the season with a 9 won, 1 lost record. This contrasts sharply with the predecessor Fort Hunt records of 0-9 in 83-84, and 1-9 in 84-85. The program was turned around in 1984-85, and the future looks bright for 1986-87. Two graduating seniors will be lost, one of whom will attend college under a rifle athletic scholarship, but the rest of the team is composed of freshmen and sophomores. A fine 8th grader has also competed with the JV team.

DRILL TEAM'S WINNING RHYTHM

Who earned the first trophy for West Potomac High school? Our own "five star" drill team, thats who!

The team began its hard work during the summer by attending camp and cleaning up with awards for "precision" Most Spirited" and numerous other titles. Once school started the dancers practiced daily to polish routines that would entertain the crowds at football games, basketball games, and pep rallies.

Team member Christi Wise thinks being on drill team is "fun but a lot of hard work, especially learning the routines on short notice."

This energetic group of rhythmic Wolverines have added a touch of creative spirit to the athletic events at West Potomac High School.

Members of the drill team "stretch to the limit" during a rehearsal warmup.

With routines memorized and smiles intact, the team takes to the field for a dazzling half time performance.

MARCHING BAND

The West Potomac Marching Band made their first year successful in more ways than one. They gave a number of concerts here at West Potomac and won first place in the Virginia State Marching Band Competition. Led by drum majors Marilyn Marquardt and Mike Keepe, the band along with the Flag Corps beat out all other marching bands from across the state in Charlottesville.

Flags also won a separate award taking first place in best auxiliary. The Flag Corps was headed this year by Mrs. Holder and Junior Captains Mari Grubic and Sheryl Powers. The Flag Corps' wonderful performances at half-time during the football and basketball seasons were the result of hard work and dedication.

Using funds obtained from fruit sales and paper drives the band was able to support its own trip to Orlando, Florida where they participated in national competition.

The drum line concentrates on its cadence as it marches downfield during halftime.

Drum major Mike Keepe keeps the band on beat.

Marching band wouldn't be the same without the brightness and motion of the flags' routines. Here, Stacy Henderson twirls her flags with precision.

A COMMAND PERFORMANCE

The Band Department under the direction of Mr. Holder has had a very successful year with the Marching Band in the Fall. But of course, there is more to the Department than just the marchers! We have a Symphonic Band that practices and performs during the Winter. How else would the marchers stay in practice and in tune. These faithful souls practice hour upon maddening hour and many times on the same piece of music — they are very dedicated because they have to be. The Symphonic Band practices by section on certain days after school and together during class time. Some of the band's numerous awards this year include: Superior rating and First Place for both Band and Flag Corps in the Virginia Band & Orchestra Directors Association Marching Festival (Class AAA), and a Superior Symphonic Band rating and Second Place in "The Great American Concert Band Contest" in Orlando, Florida.

ORCHESTRA

The Orchestra of West Potomac High School consists of many talented students. These students take part in concerts held in West Potomac's own auditorium. They also perform benefit concerts, one of which was held at the Post Office Pavillion in Washington, D.C. Before these concerts the students practice long hard hours in order to prepare for them. But in the end, the applause rewards the students after the hours spent preparing for each concert.

MIESTER SINGERS

The choral department under the direction of Rose Bocuzzi is a very fun and industrious place to be. There are three different choruses that meet during school and a Barbershop Quartet Club that meets after school. Everyone from these choruses are invited to participate in the try outs or join a chorus composed of students from around the region. This is a big privilege as many chorus members can tell you. The Mixed Chorus and the Women's Ensemble work closely together to put on concerts for the school and to work hard for regionals which are held in April. The most elite of these three groups is Madrigals. For this particular group you must try out in order to qualify. The Madrigals are very involved with many major concert projects and many dedicated hours spent both in and out of school. Much of their free time is spent practicing and performing for various organizations. Most of their music is period pieces which they perform in Renaissance costumes which some students make themselves. They were the only high school group invited to sing at the Renaissance Festival in Maryland this past fall. The choral department is sponsoring a musical this spring entitled "Annie Get Your Gun!" which should be a lot of fun.

NHS members meet once a week to discuss projects within both the school and the community. One of the projects is the after school tutoring program. Members are often seen after school tutoring fellow students in a variety of academic subjects. West Potomac's Math Team is made up of math students of all levels who demonstrate proficiency in that discipline. Members practice regularly, and every Wednesday the top five compete against other schools, in Districts, and in Regionals.

WWPHS RADIO

We on the airways of WWPHS try to promote school awareness and many achievements of the West Potomac student body, both athletically and academically. ASTRONOMY CLUB

The Astronomy Club this year has attended several lectures on such upbeat subjects as: the recent Halley's Comet encounters and a Neptune encounter. They also held special sessions at night to observe Halley's Comet. The honorable Dr. Fedders has also been one of the selected guest speakers and he also discussed the comets. These dedicated comet fans went on many a trip to the Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C. They even waited eight hours at this revered institution to hear Dr. Carl Sagan. The members even went as far as Centerville, VA to get a better look at the famous Halley's Comet. If you have a great interest in the stars this is definitely a must.

CHILD DEVELOPMENT

Child Development is one of the unique classes offered at West Potomac. It gives students a chance to analyze child psychology and understand themselves at the same time. This class involves in depth classroom study of behavior patterns of children and how to care for them. Elementary children come to class twice a week so that the students can try some of the techniques they have learned on real children. The W.P. students teach the children simple lessons about spelling and numbers as well as play with them. This is an excellent opportunity for students who are interested in child psychology and elementary education.

A special moment is shared between a child development student and two of her pals.

STUDENTS AGAINST DRUNK DRIVING

Students Against Drunk Driving are involved in several campaigns during the year. The first of which was staged around the Christmas holidays. Posters and special messages were seen on the walls around school with such familiar slogans as "Drinking and Driving don't mix!" The next project they undertook was Project Graduation which is the biggest campaign against drinking and driving. Project Graduation encompassed such activities as the Junior-Senior Prom and post-graduation parties. One benefit of this project was a toll-free number which you could call and obtain a free ride home rather than trying to drive in a drunken state. Always remember "Real friends don't let friends drive drunk!"

SAFETY COUNCIL CLUB

Student Safety Council not only handles driving drunk, as SADD does, it also deals with other aspects of safety (the use of seatbelts, etc.). The council participated in various retreats and activities. For example, students pile into their van, and, when the CB alerts them of a recent car accident, all rush to scene. There they discuss how it might have been prevented, and the steps that need to be taken. For these students, promoting safety is a year round effort.

COOPERATIVE OFFICE EDUCATION

The Cooperative Office Education is a club which consists of students who go to school part of the day and work the other half at various jobs. A majority of the students work for the military at desk jobs dealing with such subject as accounting, typing, filing and other business skills. The C.O.E students will have a definite edge over many other students because of their hands-on work experience.

FUTURE BUSINESS LEADERS OF AMERICA

FBLA, Future Business Leaders of America, is one of the largest and most enthusiastic clubs. This year's activities were focused toward the Spring Regional Conference at Northern Virginia Community College which took place on March 15. The club is also a service organization, devoted to the community. An example of this devotion can be found in the FBLA's frequent trips to Oak Meadows Retirement Home.

June Loveless sponsored the club, and Billy Keech and Jeff Carter served as club presidents.

VOCATIONAL INDUSTRIAL CLUBS OF AMERICA

The Vocational Industrial Clubs of America (VICA) is a national organization. In the VICA classes, students work on creating speeches, essays, posters, scrapbooks, etc. on a different theme dealing with business. This year's theme was "The Difference That Works." Students submit the work to competitions to compete with others students in the state. The best make it to the national convention which was held in Florida this year. The students also learn the laws and regulation of business to make the better employees. In the ICT classes, students earn 3 credits and try to get jobs in the fields that interest them as a career. The students in Cosmetology, learn the techniques used in beauty salons and offer their services to the community while earning experience.

THE PREDATOR

This year's yearbook was quite a challenge. None of the staff had worked on such a large yearbook before. The size of the book meant deadlines of 150 pages at a time. This year's goal was to produce an innovative book that had its own style, different from that of any other school.

Section editors were known to stay at school until nightfall for days in a row when it was near deadline time. Sometimes this was fun, with orders going out for pizza and the radio playing, as editors typed articles and labelled layouts. During these times the yearbook room was a picture of frenzied activity. At other times, editors were struck with "deadline doom" — too many things to do with too few people to help — and with the deadline only one day away. "Yearbook is fun," said Senior section editor Sandra Ball, "but only when you don't leave everything until the last minute." Still, somehow everything got done in the end.

Despite the frantic search for a photographer, the cameras that didn't always work, and the having to find people to sell yearbooks during "B" lunch, the staff did a good job. They managed to produce the West Potomac Predator's mint edition on time and in fine form.

MR. JOHNSON

A good-natured man sits in his tempo grading papers as the sun shines through the windows, showing the fuzzy outline of a Dallas Cowboys sticker. Math teacher Mr. Johnson explained that he liked the Cowboys because, "They have a lot of good players and are a consistently strong team."

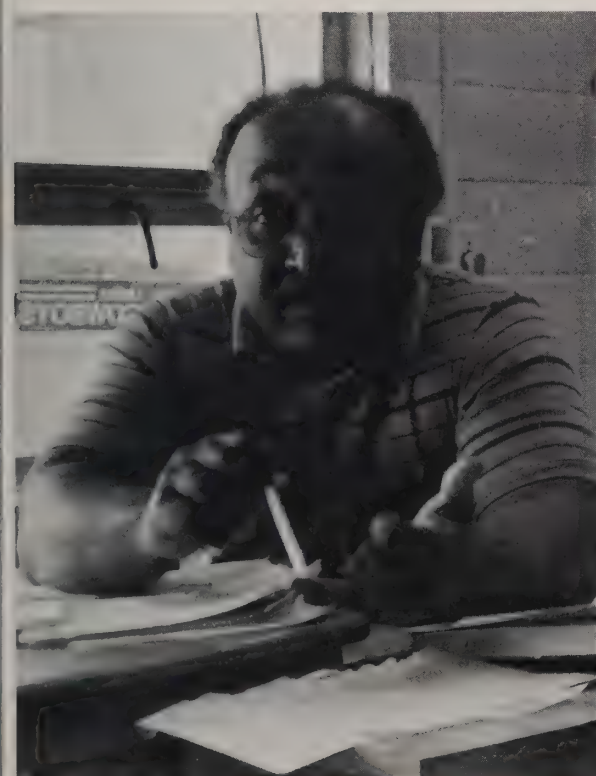

The former All-American high school football player from North Carolina keeps up with grading as he explains one of his best memories from the beginning of his career. When he was first teaching (physics), a student threatened him. Mr. Johnson accepted the challenge but went on to say the student became one of his best.

He has been teaching since 1967 and likes to stress that he wants to give his students "all the chances he can to make the best possible grades."

Many students have expressed their liking for this certain math teacher and enjoyed remembering his classes; a sign to some that this Dallas fan is a success at what he does.

As the sun starts to climb lower, he goes on grading, but ready to listen if the need should arise.

Math teacher Mr. Johnson points out the merits of the Dallas Cowboys.

TEAM TEACHING

American Civilization is a unique course that allows students to learn English and U.S. History as well as to dabble in the humanities. The class is taught in a two-hour block by Mrs. Mary O'Brien and Mr. Marvin Hupart. These two enthusiastic teachers believe that there are many advantages to this "humanities umbrella" for themselves as well as for students.

Both teachers' lessons reinforce each other, giving students the opportunity to learn using a variety of materials that do not receive as much emphasis in other classes.

A personal reason for the class to be interesting to Mrs. O'Brien is the fact that she can go beyond just teaching English, and discover new connections between materials of different humanities in a given time period.

Teaching to Mr. Hupart "is a very lonely profession." He says that it is great to be able to share the glorious moments of teaching with a person who can really appreciate a teacher's perspective.

The only problems have been the movable partitions that do little as sound barriers. While both teachers teach, the two classes can hear each other's discussions.

The American Civilizations class is anticipating a new and improved setting for next year that will better separate the teaching spaces of the two areas of study.

Team teachers Marvin Hupart and Mary O'Brien pause before going on with their day.

PHYSICS

Websters defines 'physics' as "the science dealing with the properties, changes, interaction, etc. of matter and energy: physics is subdivided into mechanics, thermodynamics, optics, accoustics, etc."

To a lot of people, physics is confusing. It seems to be a whirling dervish of names like Newton, Galileo, and Einstein. But when one looks very closely at it, they can see that physics is used in a lot of their everyday life.

Looking for the stars at night, opening a door and just dropping a book are all a part of physics in one way or another. While they may sound complicated, "laws of motion", and "gravitational forces" are really just things that go on around all the time.

Physics towers over Mr. South's head as he lectures to his class.

ROMANCE LANGUAGES

English, French, Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, and Romanian are the most commonly known of the Romance Languages, and all derive from Latin. Three of the lesser known are Catalan, Provençal, and Rhaeto-Romanic.

Of Old Latin, Late Latin, Low Latin, Medieval Latin and Modern Latin, Low Latin is where all these languages derive. From 200-300 A.D. to the time Latin disappeared as a language distinct from the various Romance Languages, it was the Latin used.

Now, various forms of it from different parts of the world are heard every day and while French, Spanish, and all the others may sound very different, they all have one common bond.

The merits of speaking Spanish is lectured by teacher Mr. Wilkinson.

MR. AND MRS. HOLDER

Mr. and Mrs. Holder came from Tennessee to West Potomac because of the school's size, potential, the proximity to good private teachers, music opportunities, and the strong background Fairfax County has in its music programs.

The thing Mr. Holder will remember the most from the 85-86 season was starting from scratch. The band had no uniforms, and the Holders didn't know where anything was stored.

They had to work hard to get uniforms and equipment together and at the same time they wrote marching drills and held rehearsals. Mrs. Holder stated that the students were eager to get things done.

All of the band's hard work has paid off. The West Potomac Marching Band won first place in a state-wide competition this year.

"When we all went out there (to compete) everyone was saying 'who are they?' Since we had no reputation, they thought we wouldn't be much good," said Mrs. Holder. "It was fun to surprise them, to see how we impressed people."

Mr. Holder said he was, "Pleased. The most important thing was that we played well. Winning was an added plus. It was the band's first seal of approval."

The Holders want West Potomac to be represented at major national conventions and with the ambition and infectious enthusiasm they have, this goal should become a reality.

Posing with their respective claims to fame, the Holders exhibit their starting instruments.

MR. DYER

Early in February 1986, Mr. Richard Dyer retired from Fairfax County. He had been with the County since 1964 at Fort Hunt and was once the Social Studies Chairman there.

He was inspired to teach because he wanted to help young people and it was a personal response for himself.

Social Studies was not the only subject he taught. He was a math major but preferred history and at one time taught mechanical drawing and drafting.

Teaching wasn't his only job, however; he used to coach basketball, track, and baseball at South Eastern Missouri.

Now that he has retired, he plans to garden, fish, golf, and write a book. Fairfax County will truly miss this wonderful teacher.

GENE DEW

Mr. Gene Dew retired earlier this school year and when he did, Fairfax County let go of a teacher who could teach almost anything.

Mr. Dew's mainstream was science but was certified to teach "everything from Math to English," said Chemistry teacher Roger Bolland.

When he taught at Groveton, Mr. Dew was very active in the school. At one time he was the Senior class sponsor, another time, the Science Department chairman. But even though he retired, he is still active on one of the many Fairfax County Public School's committees.

While he was known as a serious teacher, his students also knew he had a very dry sense of humor. Many of them told of times when Mr. Dew had told a joke and no one had understood it until a few moments later.

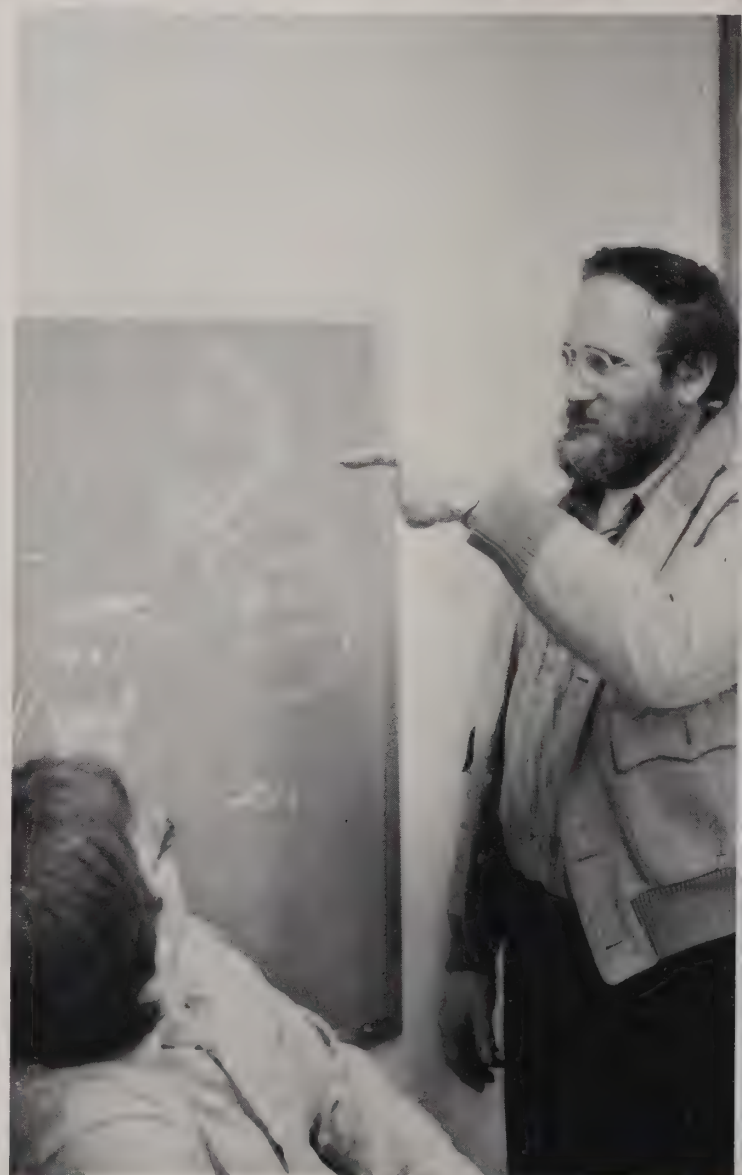

We wish Mr. Dyer and Mr. Dew the best on their retirements.

APPLICATIONS

"Essay" was a dirty word for months in many senior households, where parents liked to remind us that our applications were due in a month just as we were leaving the house Friday evening. Most parts of the applications weren't so bad, the parts that asked about activities and awards, financial information, and jobs. But then an unsuspecting (or fearful) senior would turn a page and be hit with "If you could be an apprentice for a one-year period to anyone real or fictional past or present, who it by and why?", "Describe an experience that changed your life.", "If you could relive the past four years of your life, what would you do differently?" And even, "Who are you and why?"

These were enough to send chills down the spine. The answers had to demonstrate good writing ability and originality, while at the same time showing genius without being contrived, and provide an insight of personality.

Many seniors, when faced with these requirements, had a hard time starting. "It wasn't like an English essay where if I blew it, it was just one grade", said senior Pricille Calcaterra. "This was really important for my future." As the deadline approached an increasing number of us began staring at blank sheets of paper in our typewriters, it was time to brainstorm for the best idea.

A MODERN RENAISSANCE MAN

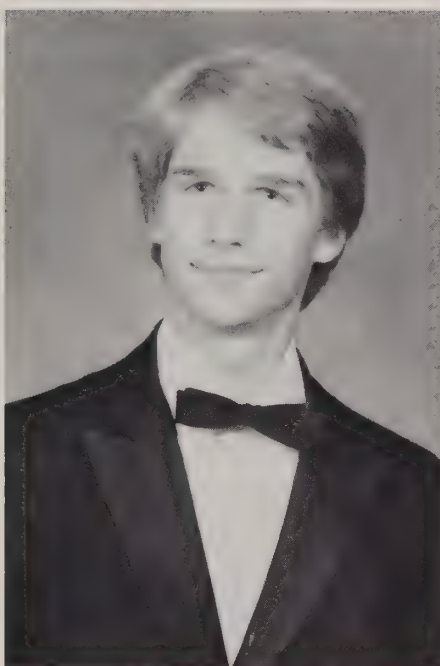

A multit talented person who can do a little of everything describes Gary Becks. Taking a look at Gary, you see a quiet, somber person but nonetheless a true individual. You may wonder what he does. Well Gary plays golf (the Golf Team were the Gunston District Champions), writes music, writes books and comic strips and draws. He also plays the guitar and keyboards. His style is quite unique since his belief in 'art for art's sake' is firmly embedded in his mentality. Although he's written 33 editions of MALIBU (the comic strip he started in tenth grade) and five novels based on a character called Soup (who is somewhat like his father) as well as couple of short stories and plays.

One would think his interest lay in writing music for films. He's already created demo tapes from his band VOX and wants to attend Berklee College of Music in Boston.

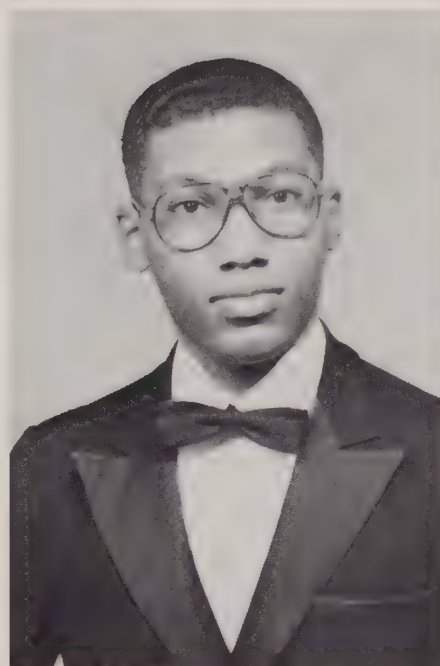

Gary feels everything he does interrelates in forming ideas for one of his many talents. Although one may wonder why he just doesn't quit school, giving him more time to express his art but feels education is very important and it comes first. To top his many talents, Gary is also a good student, having a B average. To his friends, Gary is truly an individual which is reflected through his talents. He is a true modern Renaissance Man.

MODEST TALENT

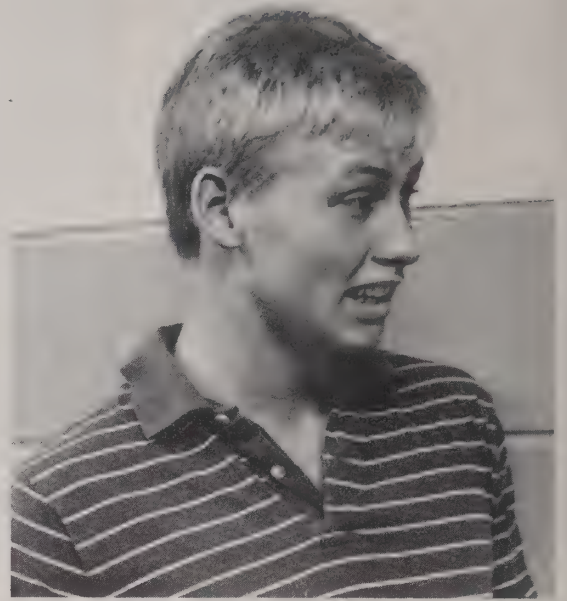

There is an enormous amount of people in West Potomac who are very talented and are quite modest about it. Sometimes it's hard to distinguish them, but occasionally, you can hear others talking about a person and you think "Wow."

Tom Ries is one example. Tom's interest in playing the violin began when he became fascinated with his grandfather's violin. Tom began seriously thinking about playing the violin after he learned it could help him through college. He would like to major in music performance.

Two of Tom's major achievements are receiving a scholarship from the National Endowment of the Arts and being the First Assistant Concert Master of the Northern Virginia Symphony. A long term goal of Tom's is to be in a string quartet or play for a major symphony or orchestra. Due to the competition, it cuts out a lot of Tom's leisure time. It is extremely difficult to juggle three hours of practicing the violin with spending time among his friends.

Though auditions and practicing takes a lot of time, Tom still manages to do other things he enjoys. Some of these are sailing and playing basketball. He has also swum and coached for AAU. Tom's achievements prove that if you enjoy something, you should go for it.

SENIORS SLUMP

Three years of high school has finally taken its toll on many Seniors. The symptoms are usually laziness, falling grades, tardiness, and being in the 'Dead Zone'. We're thinking of so many things and so many things are happening, it gets to be too much. We've had enough and we want everything to end as fast as possible. It gets to be frightening thinking about applications, being admitted, preparing for adulthood, and trying to find ourselves. Some of us want to have lots of fun but even that gets to be boring. We want something new and perhaps we'll get it. After being accepted to college, we find ourselves not caring so we fall into this 'slump' or as others have claimed "It's been with me since . . ." It's easy to fall prey especially after we've worked hard for three and a half years. From one Senior to another, it's okay but try to hang on until Graduation. It's not that far away! (Thank God)

GRADUATION!

TWO VIEWS

First:

For the first graduating class of West Potomac High School, our senior year began with uncertainty. No one knew what West Potomac would be like, because no one had ever been there before. Many of us felt that something had been taken away from us — the chance to finish our secondary education in one of two fine schools, both of which had special traditions, teachers, classes, and students. After hearing a lot about stereotyped images, some seniors did not look forward to being in a class with people from the “other” school.

As the year progressed, this all began to change. There was a lot of work to do, in our classes and also in organizing school activities. We all adjusted through mud, rain, and snow, or watching a winning football team. Everyone benefitted from increased participation in many organizations, such as band and crew, among others.

For the majority of us, rivalry between former classes was just an issue. Although some continued to refer to “Fort Hunt” or “Groveton” people, the terms usually became descriptive adjectives, as in “You don’t know her?”

Well, she has long brown hair, green eyes — she went to Groveton last year, she has government first period . . .”. Then when our time as seniors came to a close, there were many friends we wished we had known for longer than just this year.

Our senior year gave us a unique chance to grow and reach out, to become more than we were before. We remembered our pasts, yet at the same time we were able to build a new future — for ourselves and for West Potomac.

Second:

Graduation. The very word brings forth images of formality, jubilation, Pomp and Circumstance. It marks the end of a sheltered existence and signifies the beginning of adulthood. Graduation is the school event most anticipated by high school students.

Graduation is a time for reflections. Seniors reflect upon our high school careers. We look back upon good times and bad times. We see our moments of triumph and our humiliating defeats. Generally, we forget the bad times and tend to remember the good times: parties, shared experiences with our friends, getting that “A” paper or test back, talking with buddies, doing crazy things that somehow grow funnier with age.

We become melancholy and nostalgic — longing to return to a time and place that we know we never can. As eagerly as we anticipate our futures, we want the security of our pasts. Careers and college are both an exciting and somewhat frightening prospect: pampered homes and sheltered schools scare us.

Graduation Fever begins some time in September of the Senior year — after that memorable first week of school, with little time devoted to studying and a lot of time devoted to partying. But it really doesn’t start until that 10-day party period known as winter vacation. At that point, most Seniors have just completed, or are in the process of completing, their college applications and arrive at the realization that their grades really don’t matter all that much anymore. This marks the big turning point — homework is left undone so that at long last, seniors can begin to catch up on four years of lost sleep; parties frequently occur on weeknights and commence at 2:00 or earlier instead of the usual eight-ish.

In Mid-January seniors start to notice younger students. They wonder how they could ever have been as goofy as the freshmen seem to be. They start to realize how important and precious their friends are — and how empty life would be without them. They then understand the whole point of everything!!!

CLASS OF '87

We, the Junior Class officers set many goals at the beginning of the year for the Junior Class. Being a new school, we felt our primary goal was to help promote unity between the students and the faculty, and to help make everyone's first year at West Potomac an easy one. We also wanted to continue to be both a successful and productive class, to work together, to accomplish our own personal goals, and to begin to ready ourselves for college.

Sincerely,
Howard Weinberger
Junior Class President

JOINER JOINS WIT WITH TALENT

One of West Potomac's most "unique" students is named Paul Joiner. Paul is a very friendly, likeable person with many talents and hobbies. One of his favorite pastimes is entertaining his peers through jokes, impersonations and antics. "I can find things to make people laugh so easily," he claims. Television provides many of his words and characters, including "the preacher" "Vern", "Richard Simmons", "Transformers", and host of comical lyrics and songs. A "beat box" is his favorite impersonation; he does it to "spice" up the classroom "blahs".

Being funny is not the only side to this fun-loving junior. Tennis is another talent. He started his freshman year, by playing in tournaments. Paul won the title of Mt. Vernon Singles Champion 1983, and got to the 2nd round of the Gunston Districts, being ranked as 3rd seed on his tennis team last year. He plans to extend his playing into college.

Two other activities Paul is involved with is skateboarding and art. He likes illustrations: people on paper, as well as imitating them.

Paul's art teacher, Mrs. Mobley, comments, "It's evident that Paul's mind is always working on new ways to attract an audience!"

Paul goes to great heights to get attention.

A MEMOIR OF HIGH SCHOOL

Getting class rings is an important step for our Juniors. It's their gift to themselves for completing half of their high school years. The rings, however, represent more than this. Many claim they are the symbol of "upperclassmanship" and superiority. "It gives us a sense of true belonging to our school," claims Karen Dimarco. The class ring is a reminder that graduation is creeping up and soon they will be having to make important decisions about their future.

The rings' meaning will go far beyond the walls of West Potomac. It will bring constant memories of old friendships, classes, activities, and fun.

A junior proudly displays his new ring.

WONDER-WOLVERINE

Junior Ann Rosamond is an all-around athlete, but she far surpasses this basic definition — she is excellent at what she does.

Highly recognized for her field hockey achievements, Ann has been featured in many news articles & The Journal labeled her "West Potomac's tiny terror." As co-captain & top-scorer, she led the team to district & regional titles & state competition, finishing with a state ranking of second place.

For the last two summers, Ann has attended field hockey camps to develop her skills. She advanced as far as the "B" level which is usually reserved for top college players. This past summer she competed on the Junior Olympic team.

In addition to field hockey, Ann plays point guard on the varsity basketball team and second base in softball. She says that basketball is her favorite sport. She has also played the violin for several years and is a straight-A student.

In the future, Ann would like to obtain a scholarship to a good school. She is most interested in either Dartmouth, Princeton, or UVA.

Junior Anne Peterson says that Rosamond is "a great friend and a good teammate — she's outgoing, dedicated, and hard-working."

Ann says she has thought about the Olympics, and judging by her performance here at West Potomac, this Olympic hopeful has a good chance.

Ann Rosamond, ready for a fabulous game.

LIFE ON THE SLOPES KALA VISSCHER

In a recreational ski racing program in which over 100,000 young skiers participated in nationwide during the 1984-85 season, junior Kala Visscher placed second in the state in the 13-15 year old age group.

Kala has been skiing since she was 11, but last year was her first year of actual competition. She says she loves skiing. To her, it never seems like work but, instead, is fun. She claims, "I could ski from dawn until four, get something to eat, and then keep going."

In addition, Kala plays the flute. She started when was was in the fifth grade and is a member of the symphonic orchestra. However, she considers this more of a task compared to skiing.

Although she admits that she still needs to perfect her skiing skills, Kala has a determination which proves her high quality of athlete. When she falls, she is sometimes discouraged, but she always gets up and starts again. Her parents, who both ski, are very supportive. Her father especially, she says, has been a great help.

Kala does not want to stop with Virginia competition but hopes to advance to national racing. She even has dreams of the Olympics. But whatever the future may hold, Kala has shown that she is truly a master of her sport.

Kala Visscher's favorite pastime is on the slopes.

ONE MORE YEAR

Toward the end of the Junior year, the reality hits the unsuspecting student; one more year to go. College and careers are right around the corner and important milestones about to be reached. It seems that the past years have flown by, overwhelming some and bringing excitement to others. Some feel that they are not yet ready to leave the nest yet, but soon will be as the Senior year comes to an end. Still others are ready and raring to go out into the real world without a doubt. Most are tired of school and the monotony of each day. Those going on to college don't think of it as another four more years but rather as a chance to meet new people and enjoy new experiences.

Many students have found the College Career Center, as well as their guidance counselors, a great place to take their questions and ideas. As counselor Mrs. Berlstein would say, "Questions about after high school begin to enter their minds." Whatever the choice, college or career, the decisions made during our last two years are tough, important and necessary."

SMALL CONTRIBUTIONS

Every year scores of Biology students take to the hills, fields, streams, and sidewalks in search of insects willing to make a sacrificial contribution to sophomore collections. Not many creatures on this planet receive as degrading demise as being suffocated in alcohol, dried, pinned to a board, and labeled for strangers to stare at for all eternity (or the end of the grading period — whichever comes first.)

Many students put off finding their bugs to the last moment. Sophomore Ginny Cavender was seen chasing a lone fly around Springbank in mid November. Others, however, find this learning experience a challenge. "It's interesting finding bugs you don't see very often — some of them are really sick — I've seen lumber crickets and stink bugs which are gross," commented Donielle Grabner.

This yearly search for bugs, while providing tool for biological understanding, may seem cruel to some students, but not everyone can be pleased all the time. Sophomores also do leaf collections, and remember, some people talk to plants.

“SOPHOMORIC”

Being a sophomore means a lot. The best part is not being a FRESHman. How does this feel? “It’s awesome!!” answer most sophomores. High school life is now almost easier. One year has prepared you and the fun can begin. “You know better than last year,” says Sejal Amin. Everyone agrees there is a lot more spirit and people are more energetic. One year is over with and there’s some relief. You can spend less time being overwhelmed and more time being confident.

NORTHERN BEATS HIS WAY TO THE TOP

Sophomore Eric Northern is one kid who can really play the drums. "People are surprised because I am so little and play so well," he claims. Well, "little" Eric has so far played in Washington D.C.'s Constitution Hall and on Channel 9's Morning Break.

At 8 years old he started playing. His first instrument was the violin, but a suggestion from his instructor to try the drums really paid off.

Eric Northern has extremely poor eyesight.

This has helped him in his music because his hearing is sharper. He memorizes the beats because he can't read the music.

Eric plans to make a career out of the drums. He longs for the recognition and "the feeling I get when I hear the applause." He practices 18 hours a week; His determination to be the best and the support of his family and friends will keep him going throughout his competition and aspiring future career.

Sophomores get a feeling of what it's like behind the wheel.

A POWERFUL DRIVE

Many sophomores this year have a taste of new found freedom. They took Driver's Ed and began to get their licenses. After sixteen years of walking and bumming rides, sophomores gain independence. They can drive! With this tremendous responsibility also comes a lot of enthusiasm and relief. "Never again will we have to find a way to go places," says Jenny Van Horn. Russ Tickle and Steven Arner feel cars mean better dates. Kate Hamilton and Jeanne Mattison can't wait to go "cruising." "Suddenly you are in control of everything," claims Jenny Scoville. With all this happiness, however, came a lot of work. First, nine weeks of classroom education. Nine weeks of taking notes, tests, and watching disgusting movies about what could happen if the seat belt is not worn. Nerves are tested in "Behind the Wheel" and at least there is THE TEST as Debbie Galbreath states this feeling: "Finally a little bit more freedom to become myself and find out what life is all about."

SUZY TAKES CENTER STAGE

Many students recognize Suzy Nece as one of those actresses who can be counted on to shine in the school productions. Suzy doesn't feel that she has already reached her optimum level of performance. She believes that there is always room for improvement.

Suzy has been dancing since she was eleven years old. She has gotten a lot of satisfaction from the hours spent in practice. "The performances make it all worthwhile," she says. Her acting career began when she started taking classes in school in seventh grade. However, she feels that her dramatic tendencies began long before then.

Suzy's performances are not limited to the school. She has performed at numerous locations in the area, such as George Mason University and the Post Office Pavillion with the Fairfax County Dance Company. Her main reason for performing is, "You're not yourself when you perform — you are as much into the role as you can be. That is the fun part about acting."

Suzy Nece takes a quick glance at her "Fools" script on her way to play practice afterschool.

CLASS OF '89

The year has only just begun and so many new friends are being made. The Spirit is rising with encouragement everyday. The cheerleaders are awesome and our field hockey teams and football teams started the new Wolverine Spirit out on the right foot. The freshmen are unique in that we have accomplished much with community day and that led to Homecoming and our homecoming float — which most of us had a part in building. The Class of '89 has an even greater quality, being the only class to participate in the first four years of our high school, we can truly say that we are dedicated, fullfledged Wolverines. Despite being the brunt of many "freshmen" jokes, our first year as the class of '89 has been awesome, let's stay that way in the years to come.

KHAMLA KICKS UP HER HEELS

Khamla feels satisfied with her talents.

"She's talented." That is the best way to summarize freshman Khamla Somphanh. She's been dancing for four years and doing gymnastics for three. She has participated in national competitions for both and won with her team "The Top Hats" from Terry's School of Dance and Gymnastics. She was involved in various other competitions throughout this summer and summers past. She's traveled to Ocean City and North Carolina to compete.

Competitions are crucial and Khamla spends most of her free time dancing to prepare for them. This doesn't bother her because she "loves dancing!" Before each competition the team is scared but they use each other to get "psyched" for what they must do. Khamla claims the team has helped her mature also, because she is the youngest member.

Khamla got started with her "unique" talent mainly because of her sisters. They took dance and she followed in their footsteps one year later. Her parents are a great support, but they don't really see her dance. Her future plans are to gain a scholarship from an art school. How is Khamla coping with all this? She sighs, "Sometimes it gets to be too much, but friends help me through."

WHAT DOES THE CLASS OF '89 DO WITH ITS TIME?

The first year of high school is, for some, the most difficult one. Freshmen can't drive, so parents, and big brothers or sisters are relied upon to get to places like track practice, music lessons, dances, and football games.

Since most freshmen don't have jobs, there isn't much spending money . . .

So what do freshmen do in their spare time?

Says Ansley Perkins, "I go see my friends at their houses." Some freshmen do extra-curricular activities like soccer, field hockey, basketball, gymnastics, and football. One must always have a quarter handy to call up someone, along with a lot of prayers and hopes that someone will be home to pick you up.

With so many possibilities, Freshman, Edward Strozer, has a hard time deciding what to do after school.

High school life can be overwhelming.

TO BE A FRESHMAN

Being a Freshman is probably the hardest thing to be in high school. Many things are new and adjustments have to be made. Some found they enjoy the freedom and the social atmosphere. There are more privileges granted and sometimes even a lot more trust put on the students by the teachers. You all of a sudden have "older" friends. You are more involved in your school than you have ever been before. School almost becomes your life. Most importantly, this is the first year that grades really COUNT. You have to start buckling down, working for good grades and planning what classes you want to take in the next few years to get enough credits for a high school diploma.

J.R. OLYMPIAN

When asked to describe Freshman J.R. Lapira, the one word that most often comes to mind is "impressive". J.R. is ranked #1 in the nation for Tae Kwon Do of his age group. For the last five years he has been undefeated with fourteen gold medals in this field. The Junior Olympic Team has selected him to compete internationally, where he stands as a second degree black belt.

It all started on December 11, 1978. At age 8, J.R. took his first Tae Kwon Do class at YOO'S MARTIAL ARTS in Alexandria. What was his incentive?" I was tired of being beat up by a twelve year old. "He wanted to learn to fight back, but his mother insisted on discipline. The martial Arts included both.

J.R. resented his classes at first because they interfered with his free time. Soon after, however, he "found out Tae Kwon Do was a legitimate sport, and since I had no previous sports interests, I became more enthusiastic."

He attribute his success not only to this enthusiasm, but to his parents and religious faith. What's next for J.R.? He will be trying out for the 1988 U.S. Olympic Team, of course.

J.R. demonstrates his gold medal techniques.

THE PREMIER YEAR

"A Clean Slate" was chosen as the theme for this yearbook because, at the beginning of this year, West Potomac had no history. It was a school without a past, a slate without writing. Now the slate is no longer empty. Everyone involved with our school — the students, teachers, and the community — has been a part of making West Potomac work. We have come a long way from the first days in August and September when uncertainty mixed with curiosity was in our minds, when West Potomac was still a name that was identified with nothing.

Today that name stands for excellence in many facets of student life. The school offers more classes than were available to either of the two former schools that merged to become West Potomac. The athletic program combines wide participation and enthusiasm to create a winning spirit, as exhibited by the great number of state, regional, and district championships that were won this year. Equally impressive is the tremendous number of student organizations and activities that are available to all, allowing growth in talents and personal interests. All of these traditions, and the increased diversity present in all programs, were established this year.

The school has a great deal to be proud of. It would do well to increase the amount of respect shown West Potomac, and to decrease vandalism. This can happen with everyone's cooperation, and it will cause the school to become an even better place to learn. Now that the first year has passed, there is an establishment of direction and purpose for West Potomac. All of the writing on the slate has made it what it is today, but the slate is not filled up. There is room for all the accomplishments that are ahead of students in the years to come.
